Market Board Denounced

At least one of the province's 13 marketing boards has come under severe criticism from the government's multi-party standing committee studying agriculture in the province.

The committee recommends the Interior Vegetable Marketing Board be dissolved although some of its functions could be assumed by another board.

In one of the five volumes that will eventually emerge from the committee on marketing boards, the committee's research staff concludes the Interior vegetable board is the worst example of a marketing board operation in B.C.

"It has not expanded demand for vegetable products, it has mismanaged its own affairs causing significant financial losses to producers and taxpayer and, further, has apparently lost the confidence of a large portion of its producers," the report says.

The report which was released Monday covers about half the marketing boards and although it was less critical of the other boards, did make a number of recommendations for improved service.

The committee's study on grape growing concludes current viticulture research is too slow to respond to industry needs.

"A healthy and expanding wine and grape industry in B.C. will require the support of adequate ongoing research into both the practical aspects of viticulture and wine making as well as the economic and marketing aspects."

The report also notes the B.C. grape industry produces too many grape varieties not suited to wine making and recommends the development of a non-wine grape processing industry.

Other recommendations:

—Mushroom production is expanding so rapidly, its marketing board must undertake a thorough examination of markets to ensure growth in this field.

—The cranberry marketing board has little effect on the industry so should either be disbanded or take a more active role in the industry.

Still to come are the committee's analyses of marketing boards that have jurisdiction over poultry, dairy, sheep and oyster products.

$50,000 JEWELRY THEFT

Thieves used a ladder to gain entrance to Tasar's jewelry store in The Empress Hotel to steal rings, bracelets and pendants.

Victoria city police said today they still don't have a full count of the jewelry stolen from several display cases.

Hotel sources said the loss could run as high as $50,000.

"There was a sizeable quantity of jewelry taken," said a police spokesman.

Store manager Richard Arora is out of town and unavailable for comment.

Disco Fire . . . Owners Charged

The operators of a downtown Victoria disco have been charged with arson after an investigation into a $200,000 blaze at the club Oct. 17.

Charged are Anthony J. Mettes, 20, who gave his address as 504-1039 View, and Paul Leonard Taylor, 24, of Langley.

Mettes was taken into custody in Qualicum Monday while Taylor was arrested in Vancouver.

The two men appeared in provincial court and were remanded in custody for 24 hours for a bail hearing and election of trial method.

Police and fire department investigators opened a probe into the fire at Hobo's Teen Disco in the Duck Building, 1316-1322 Broad, after witnesses testified hearing several explosions shortly before the fire broke out about noon.

PUZZLE OF VANISHED CULTISTS

Missing 400 Butchered?

Times News Services

Guyanese troops searched the jungle today for hundreds of U.S. cultists who fled from a mass suicide in which more than 400 others died, some shot but most poisoned by a mixture of Kool-Aid and cyanide.

The most perplexing question left to be answered was the whereabouts a remaining 400 other people whose bodies have not been found.

There was speculation that hundreds of people fled to the jungle and simply have not yet found their way out. There also was another theory: That some of the Jonestown security men took hundreds of the commune's residents to a remote area, possibly to be shot.

Lending some support to that theory was the fact that the body of Tom Kice, one of those believed to have been among the gunmen who attacked Congressman Leo Ryan's party last Saturday in the incident which sparked the jungle bloodbath, has not been found.

Also, lawyers Mark Lane and Michael Garry, who escaped into the jungle when the killing began, reported Monday that they hard scattered screaming and shooting.

The bodies of sect leader Jimmy Jones and his wife were among 409 corpses which a police spokesman said Guyanese troops had counted in and around the meeting hall in Jonestown. One reporter who visited the scene said it "looked like a garbage dump where somebody dumped a lot of rag dolls."

Jones and several others had been shot, presumably by themselves. The others had drunk Kool-Aid into which the camp doctor mixed cyanide.

Also found at the camp was $500,000 in cash and some jewelry. Unconfirmed reports also said $500,000 in gold and hundreds of social security cheques had also been found.

Fifteen survivors were reported found, three in the camp and 12 who came out of the jungle. Estimates of the missing ranged from more than 375 to more than 775. An exact estimate was not possible because reports of the settlement's total population ranged from 800 to 1,200. Most were from California, headquarters of the sect.

One of the survivors found im Jonestown, a 26-year-old teacher named Odell Rhodes, said after Ryan left the settlement, Jones announced by loudspeaker that he had ordered the congressman and the journalists with him killed.

Rhodes said the the suicide was ordered after the killers returned to Jonestown with word that some of Ryan's party had escaped to report what happened and what they had found in the settlement. The survivor said the settlers had been rehearsing suicide for months so that they could kill themselves if their way of life was seriously threatened.

Meanwhile, a flag-draped coffin bearing Ryan's body was returned to his home town of San Francisco today for burial.

It was met by Ryan's former wife, Margaret Ryan Williams, and three of his five children, Kevin, 27; Patricia, 24, and Shannon, 21, and about 30 friends and other relatives.

An eight-sailor Navy honor guard removed the gray metal casket from the four-engine jet and placed it in a black hearse for the drive to a nearby mortuary.

About 60 reporters and photographers were on hand.

Remaining in the plane were two other caskets, containing the bodies of San Francisco Examiner photographer Gregory Robinson and NBC cameraman Robert Brown, who also were killed in the attack last Saturday. The C-141 was to continue on to Los Angeles with their bodies.

'They Began With Babies'

By CHARLES KRAUSE
Washington Post

PORT KAITUMA, Guyana — When the Rev. Jim Jones learned that Rep. Leo J. Ryan had been killed but that some members of the congressman's party had survived, Jones called his followers together and told them that the time had come to commit the mass suicide they had rehearsed several times before.

"They started with the babies," administering a potion of Kool-aid mixed with cyanide, Odell Rhodes recalled Monday when I revisited Jonestown to view the horrifying sight of 405 bodies — men, women and children, most of them grouped around the altar where Jones himself lay dead.

Rhodes is the only known survivor of Jonestown who witnessed a part of the suicide rite before managing to escape. He was helping Guyanese authorities identify the dead.

Most of those who drank the deadly potion served to them by a Jonestown doctor, Lawrence Schact, and by ..., did so willingly, Rhodes said. Mothers often would give the cyanide to their own children before taking it themselves, he said.

But others who tried to escape were turned back by armed guards who ringed the central pavilion where the rite was carried out, Rhodes said. They were then forced to drink the poisoned Kool-aid and shortly after the mass killings began, Rhodes said, "It just got all out of order. Babies were screamng, children were screaming and there was mass confusion."

It took about five minutes for the liquid to take its final effect. Young and old, black and white, grouped themselves, usually near other family members, often with their arms around each other, waiting for the cyanide to kill them.

Second Mideast Summit Needed?

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel today approved a U.S.-drafted peace treaty with Egypt but rejected as "unacceptable" a timetable for Palestinian autonomy, leaving the talks deadlocked and possibly in need of a second summit meeting.

The Israeli cabinet voted 15-2 at the end of a six-hour session to approve a U.S. draft treaty drawn up a month ago that ties it to an over-all Middle East peace settlement. The cabinet had earlier rejected the pact.

But the approval today did not meet Egypt's demand for a specific timetable for Palestinian autonomy on the occupied West Bank and the Gaza Strip, leaving the talks that began Oct. 12 still stymied and perhaps again requiring intervention by President Carter.

"The latest proposals of the government of Egypt are inconsistent with the Camp David agreements and unacceptable to Israel," Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said in a prepared statement read to reporters.

He said both sides could start negotiations on the timetable after a treaty is signed. But Egypt wants a commitment before the signing.

Government sources said if Egypt reacted favorably to the cabinet decision, Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defence Minister Ezer Weizamn will return to Washington by the end of the week.

Israel's argument has been that it will not go beyond what was agreed at Camp David.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said Monday he would welcome another three-way meeting and an Israeli official said the Jewish nation would have no objections to such a conference.

Meanwhile in Baghdad, a self-styled Arab People's Court Monday found Sadat guilty of high treason and usurping power through his peace initiative toward Israel.

The court, presided over by Sultan al-Shawi, sentenced Sadat in his absence to be stripped of his nationality.

The "trial" was organized by the Arab People's Congress.

BUS BLASTED

BEIRUT (UPI) — A powerful explosion ripped through a busload of Syrian peacekeeping soldiers today as it was passing through the mountain town of Aley, police sources said today.

No accurate casualty figures were immediately available, but initial reports from the town 12 miles east of Beirut said the bus was full and that a number of soldiers had been killed or wounded.

It was not immediately clear if the explosion was caused by a bomb placed inside the bus itself or in a car near the bus at the time of the blast. The explosion occurred as the bus was passing through a traffic circle in Aley.

Residents of Aley said several shops were set on fire near the bus.

The mountain town of Aley is in territory controlled by Syrian troops of the Arab League peacekeeping force, which were sent to Lebanon two years ago to end Lebanon's civil war.

The Syrians have been involved in major fighting with rightist Christian militias since the end of the 1975-76 civil war.

Workplace Alcoholism: Women Outpacing Men

TORONTO (CP) — More working women than working men have alcohol problems, a University of Waterloo study indicates.

"It's surprising because the common notion has always been that men drink more than women," said Gail Vibe, 25, co-author of the study.

Miss Vibe and Rob Thistle, both graduate psychology students, recently investigated the drinking habits of more than 500 full-time university employees.

The study showed that while the frequency of drinking by men and women was about the same, women drank more on each drinking occasion than men.

The average for women was about 3½ drinks each time, the average for men slightly less than three.

In the under-25 age group, men drank more frequently than women. But among those aged between 51 and 55, women drank more often than men. In the over-56 age group, men were the heavier drinkers.

In both men and women, the younger and better-educated persons tended to be the heavier drinkers. The study found no definite relationship between drinking and job satisfaction.

The consequences of drinking were different for men and women. More men than women said it caused absenteeism and poor performance at work.

"Women seem to be able to cover up better than men, both socially and at home," Miss Vibe said.

"They tend not to show the obvious signs of drunkenness or alcoholism."

Herring Men Reject Offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Herring fishermen on British Columbia's southwest coast have voted 97 per cent to reject the fishing industry's latest contract offer of $96 a ton for herring, a union spokesman said Monday.

The spokesman for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union said fishermen along the rest of the coast are still voting, but the results are expected to be much the same.

Union president Jack Nichol had recommended that union members reject the offer from the Fisheries Association of B.C.

The spokesman said the next move is up to the industry.

Meanwhile, union members have also voted solidly to tie up boats at noon Dec. 7 and launch a demonstration here the following day outside the hotel at which the next Canada-United States fishing treaty negotiations are to be held.

The union has accused Canadian negotiators of selling out to the U.S.

16 Await End

PASPEBIAC, Que. (CP) — Sixteen people have settled into this remote area of the Gaspe peninsula to wait for the end of the world—and they believe it will come this winter.

The five men and 11 women, aged between 18 and 31, are the remnant of a group of 29 who installed themselves earlier this year in a hand-built log house.

The remaining 13 unbelievers have apparently given up the vigil in the wilderness, about 500 kilometres northeast of Quebec City.

The 16 who remain are members of a religious sect, begun a little over a year ago at Ste. Marie de Beauce, which believes the second coming of Christ is imminent.

Tories Win 11 Yukon Seats

WHITEHORSE (CP) — The Progressive Conservatives elected 11 members to the 16-seat legislative assembly in Monday's territorial election, giving the party a majority in the first Yukon election fought on party lines.

Conservative leader Hilda Watson, however, lost in her own riding to Liberal Alice McGuire, one of the first two native Indians to be elected in the territory. Ms. McGuire received 188 votes in the Kluane riding to beat Mrs. Watson by 38.

With the number of seats increased to 16 from 12, the Liberals won two seats and the New Democratic Party won one. Two independents were elected.

NDP leader Fred Berger was also defeated, finishing second in Klondike riding. Berger polled 130 votes, 22 less than Conservative winner Meg McCall.

The other native Indian elected to the previously all-white assembly was Conservative Grafton Njootli, who outpolled his Liberal opponent, 59-29, in the riding of Old Crow.

Party leader Iain MacKay was the other victorious Liberal, winning in the riding of Whitehorse Riverdale South. He polled 420 votes to 354 for Conservative Maggie Heath.

Mrs. Watson said her loss marred "what was a fantastic night for celebration in the Yukon". She said she might resign as leader, adding that she would not run in a byelection in order to lead the party from inside the assembly.

Light snow fell in some areas of the 536,000-square-kilometre territory populated by only 23,000 persons. About 80 per cent of the 9,750 eligible voters cast ballots.

Parrot Asks BCFL Backing For Public Information Blitz

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) hopes to end internal union squabbling over CUPW's illegal strike "once and for all" today at the British Columbia Federation of Labor's annual convention, postal union leader Jean-Claude Parrot said Monday.

Parrot said he will ask the entire labor movement to back CUPW in a cross-country information campaign against the federal government, which ordered an end to the union's legal strike Oct. 19.

The strike continued until Oct. 25 and the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) refused to back the postal union in its defiance of the law.

There was some criticism of CLC leaders Monday as the militant B.C. federation opened its convention.

Bob Donnelly, seeking to replace retiring president George Johnston as leader of the 250,000-member federation, blasted the CLC for publicly attacking CUPW while it is still attempting to negotiate a contract.

CLC president Dennis McDermott, scheduled to speak to the federation delegates after Parrot, accused the postal union last week of using the labor movement as a stage for its "ideological ego trips."

He said the CLC did not back the postal union because it did not consult the congress affiliates in advance of the defiance of the back-to-work bill.

McDermott said congress executives felt that nothing short of a general strike could have defeated the government in its contract dispute with the 23,000 postal workers.

More than 850 delegates to the B.C. federation's annual convention endorsed an executive council report that gave "unhesitating support" to the postal workers.

With Johnston stepping down after eight years as president of the federation, militant and moderate factions are battling.

Donnelly, head of the Telecommunication Workers Union, proposes to continue the independent, militant course set by Johnston.

Parrot said the publicity campaign will continue even if he is in jail. Nine executives of the postal union face criminal charges following the union's defiance of the back-to-work order. If convicted, they face a maximum of two years in jail.

The information campaign will come in the form of advertisements and information picket lines manned by postal workers on their own time.

The information picket lines will crop up immediately, especially at locations where federal cabinet ministers are scheduled to speak.

Parrot said CUPW's information campaign will include a demand for a return to free collective bargaining.

He said postal workers will participate actively in the next federal election campaign, picketing meetings and questioning candidates about their positions on public service strikes.

Parrot is due to appear in court in Ottawa on Monday to have a trial date set.

He said postal workers plan demonstrations of protest across the country on that day.

UIC Plan Sparking Backlash, Labor Warns

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor leaders urged Parliament today to scrap a proposed tightening of the unemployment insurance program on grounds it is punishment of thousands of unemployed Canadians.

The powerful Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) and United Auto Workers (UAW) said the proposals make scapegoats of the unemployed, divert public attention from real economic problems, will create more unemployment and contain disincentives for short-term work by the jobless.

The two groups, representing about two million organized workers across the country, made the statements in briefs to MPs in the all-party Commons manpower committee studying proposals to cut unemployment insurance costs by $1.5 billion in two years.

"God knows we have enough unemployment in this country without inducing even more unemployment," said Julien Major, CLC executive vice-president.

The UAW brief said "mere words will not suffice to convey our anger at the tenor and substance of what we consider to be one of the most singular regressive moves by the present government."

Added UAW spokesman Basil (Buzz) Hargrove: "This is wrong and there is going to be a backlash in this country. Leaders of the trade union movement are not going to sit idle as this legislation goes by."

Both groups predicted the unemployed will vote en masse against the government in the next election if the bill is passed. And both groups said the legislation is being rammed through Parliament. Several of the measures are to come into effect January 1.

Both labor groups said women and youth are the prime victims of the measures, that lower benefits will reduce disposable income and lead to further unemployment and that the public has been duped.

NO TURKEY GRINCH IN B.C., BOARD SAYS

Victorians take heart: Your Christmas cheer will in no way be diminished by outrageously inflated turkey prices.

That's the word today from the chairman of the B.C. Turkey Marketing Board.

Ron Hepple said turkey hoarding to force up retail prices is an eastern phenomenon and can't possibly happen here in B.C.

Hepple said big eastern corporations like Canada Packers and Swifts may be able to hold back birds from retailers in an effort to drive up the prices but if small B.C. processors tried the same act, "retailers would crucify us."

Hepple's comments came after the chairman of the Canadian Turkey Marketing Agency warned in Ottawa that wholesalers — the middlemen who buy turkeys from farmers, process them and sell the dressed birds to retailers — are holding about 50 million pounds of turkeys in cold storage to try and artificially inflate the retail price at Christmas time.

There are four major processors in B.C., the largest of which is the government-owned Panco Poultry. Hepple said there is little chance a government-owned agency would dare try hoarding.

And if the biggest producer is following normal marketing procedure, then there's not much else that smaller companies can do but follow suit.

However, if consumers still aren't convinced, they have two courses of action.

First, they can go out and buy their Christmas turkey right away and keep it frozen for a month.

This would force retailers to increase orders from wholesalers.

The other thing is to watch the price. Hepple said turkey growers have received only a one cent per pound increase since Thanksgiving.

So if the retail price at Christmas is more than a few cents higher than the retail price at Thanksgiving, consumers should ask their supermarket manager for an explanation.

Growers are paid 52 cents a pound live weight for their turkeys. There is about an 80 per cent yield from each bird.

Thanksgiving retail prices ranged from $1.09 and $1.25 a pound.

Seniors' Discount Santas Sought

Victoria Ald. Robin Blencoe's crusade to win discounts for seniors is still going strong but could use an added boost for the Christmas season, the alderman said Monday.

Blencoe said since he started his campaign last summer, 29 firms have agreed to offer reduced rates for senior citizens.

Bookstores, clothing stores, a taxi company, a bakery, florists, an optical firm and tourist attractions have all started giving old people a cheaper rate.

But Blencoe says that Christmas is a hard time for seniors and the business community should make a special effort to help out at this time of year.

He urged any firm interested in joining the cause to call him at city hall.

Supply Director Named

The purchasing manager at Vancouver General Hospital will become Royal Jubilee Hospital's new director of supply services Dec. 11.

RJH associate director Mike Fraser says Jim Holden, 36, who was among about 40 people who applied for the position, will be responsible for the acquisition, processing, storing and distribution of all supplies.

The position has been vacant since July, 1977, when former director, Carl Hortie retired because of poor health.

Holden entered the purchasing department of Vancouver General Hospital in 1968 and was either the assistant or purchasing manager for the past eight years.

RJH purchasing manager Jack Fyme is due to retire in January, 1979, after 40 years' service with the hospital.

Fraser said Holden will be exploring every facet of the purchasing and supply operation and will evaluate how the department should be run in the future.

the weather

Record temperatures were again established overnight in central B.C. under mainly clear skies. Over the north coast and northern B.C. skies were partly cloudy with occasional snow or rain from a weak disturbance moving through that area. During the next few days a depression moving into the Gulf of Alaska will bring an end to the present cold snap Wednesday as milder Pacific air gradually spreads across B.C. Precipitation will spread into the north coast Wednesday morning and gradually across the remainder of B.C. late Wednesday and Thursday. For the interior the precipitation will be snow. For coastal areas a mixture of rain and snow can be expected at some locations.

Krishna Sectist Sentenced

VANCOUVER (CP) — A member of the Hare Krishna religious sect, who pleaded guilty to four charges of fraud, was given a one-year suspended sentence on each count when he appeared in provincial court Monday.

James Douglas Hays, 32, was also ordered to do 100 hours of community work for elderly people.

Hays was charged after he collected $12 dollars in donations in a door-to-door canvass during which he said he was collecting funds for a childrens' hospital here.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

Exclusive Healing Substance Relieves Pain As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids.

If you want satisfactory relief from 'Itching Piles'—here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance that promptly relieves the burning itch and pain—actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing.

In one case after another 'very striking improvement' was reported and verified. And most important . . . this improvement was maintained over a period of months.

All this was accomplished by a healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulate growth of new tissue. Now Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H. Ask for it at all drug stores—satisfaction or money refunded.

First Refugees Heading For Canada on Thursday

Times News Services

PORT KLANG — Western immigration officials interviewing the 2,500 Vietnamese refugees aboard the freighter Hai Hong off the Malaysian coast said today the first group will go to Canada and might leave as early as Thursday.

Four Canadian and three French officials are questioning the refugees in preparation for giving then asylum and U.S. immigration officials were expected to join them today or Wednesday.

France has said it will take about 1,000, Canada 600 and Belgium 150. West Germany, Britain, Switzerland and the Netherlands have said they may take those with relatives in their countries.

The U.S. has agreed to expand their 1978 quota of 25,000 Indochina refugees and take 750 from the Hai Hong.

Small groups of the refugees were being questioned on a police launch alongside the Hai Hong and then sent back to the freighter anchored off Port Klang, on the west coast of Malaysia. Malaysian authorities already have interviewed the refugees, and officials said the first group will be off the freighter in a few days.

France said it wants refugees who speak French or have relatives in France.

"When we have finalized whom we will take we will inform the refugees," said a French embassy spokesman. "We are chartering several planes to take them to France. The first group should leave from the airport before Monday."

With its refugee camps already jammed with 40,000 Indochinese, Malaysia refused to let the Hai Hong land its passengers when it arrived two weeks ago. The government contended they had paid for passage on the rusty 1,500-ton freighter and therefore were not refugees.

Diplomats in Singapore said the acceptance of the Hai Hong refugees by Western governments is certain to increase the flow from Vietnam.

"Now that it's certain that those on the Hai Hong will find sanctuary somethere, you can expect other ships to make their move," one diplomat said. He reported at least two other coastal freighters were believed ready to join in the traffic.

If You Can Help Please Do, Asks Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — The immigration department is appealing for help in settling in Canada a group of up to 600 Vietnamese refugees now stranded aboard the freighter Hai Hong near the Malaysian coast.

The department is asking Canadians to inform employment offices or immigration centres if they are willing to provide help such as babysitting, housing and assistance in finding doctors.

"If people have suitable accommodation it would be very helpful," the spokesman said. "We won't expect accommodation for free because we do provide settlement allowances for housing, food and clothing."

The government now is planning ways of transporting the refugees to Canada and finding homes for them here.

"We have practical problems, particularly with ensuring that when they get off the aircraft in Canada they have warm clothing," the spokesman said.

After arriving at a central "staging area" where the refugees would complete immigration papers, they would be moved to communities across the country. The Quebec government has already asked for 200.

All Chinese? Just Wait. ..

PEKING (Reuter) — China said Monday that it is changing the spelling of some names and places—which may leave many of the terms almost unrecognizable to foreigners.

Peking would be Beijing under the country's phonetic alphabet, while Hong Kong would become Xianggang.

The official Hsinhua news agency said the governmnent has ordered the phonetic alphabet, pinyin, to be used in future to standardize names in such languages as English, French, German and Spanish.

But if the system were introduced—a previous attempt in 1975 was quietly dropped without explanation—it looks as though the late leader, Mao Tse-tung, would not become Mao Zedong, and Sun Yat-senn founder of the Chinese republic, would not be Sun Chongshan.

The government said the change need not apply to certain historical names of people and places or to trade marks and trade names, though the agency did not define what was considered historical.

Under the new system, Communist party Chairman Hua Kuo-feng would be Hua Guo-feng, and Senior Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping would become Deng Xiaoping.

In the last 30 years, Chinese officials have devised several ways of simplifying their language, and have already introduced many new characters to make books and newspapers easier to read.

In 1951, Mao said that a phonetic alphabet was needed for complete reform and, in 1958, it was announced that a Latin rather than cyrillic system had been chosen.

Since then, progress has been slow. Billboards and street signs are given in pinyin as well as characters, and some enterprises such as restaurants render their names this way. But few Chinese seem capable of reading pinyin.

Hsinhua said the government has ordered that pinyin be used in all new diplomatic documents, passports, certificates, contracts, agreements, publications and various kinds of export catalogues, sample books, explanations and bills.

It added that the United Nations conference on the standardization of geographical names, held in Athens last August, had adopted a Chinese proposal that pinyin be the international way of rendering Chinese place names.

By following pinyin, foreigners would pronounce Chinese words as do the people of Peking, who use China's standard language.

Airborne Bunk-ups Shocking Japanese Stewardesses

TOKYO (Reuter) — Japanese airline stewardesses, upset over almost-naked travellers, are demanding an end to sleeper-service accommodations on international jumbo jets.

Their cabin crew union says the trouble began after sleeper service was introduced by Japan Air Lines aboard long-distance Boeing-747 flights.

The service, with six partitioned cubicles on each plane, was introduced in August.

The complaints have become a major issue in a strike by stewardesses and pursers, who also are seeking larger year-end bonuses.

"Sometimes a male customer is without his shirt when I open the curtains to deliver drinks," complained one JAL stewardess. "At other times, I must face intimate couples in bed."

The union said it is demanding a halt to the sleeper service not only on moral grounds but also because the bunks can be used by hijackers preparing for attacks on the crew.

Indira Now Facing Contempt Charges

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi today was charged with contempt of Parliament by blocking an investigation into her son's business affairs during her emergency rule of India.

The charges were made public 24 hours after Mrs. Gandhi returned to Parliament for the first time since she was ousted from office 20 months ago by voters angered by the 1975-77 emergency rule.

The House Committee on Privilege said in a 355-page report to Parliament, accompanied by 1,007 pages of evidence, that Mrs. Gandhi was guilty of "misuse of office" while prime minister to favor a project to develop a small car, called Maruti, run by her son Sanjay.

The investigation of the matter began last January and the report was dated Oct. 27, 10 days before the by-election in Chikmagalur, in southern Karnataka state, that returned Mrs. Gandhi to Parliament.

Mrs. Gandhi, who was 62 last Sunday, also faces a number of criminal charges stemming from her authoritarian rule during the emergency and her refusal to testify to an investigating commission about that rule.

The committee found Mrs. Gandhi guilty of committing breach of privilege and contempt of parliament on two counts:

- Obstructing and harassing officials to collect information required for parliamentary business.
- Refusing to take an oath and testify before the committee when she was summoned before it.

The committee said Mrs. Gandhi in 1975 obstructed government officials from collecting information about the Maruti Project, required for answering a question raised in Parliament in 1974.

The committee said at her insistance four junior government officials were "suspended, harassed, and their houses were raided" by police on false corruption charges.

An intelligence investigation later absolved the officials and they were reinstated.

The committee also charged two officials of Mrs. Gandhi's government were guilty of contempt of Parliament for initiating false cases against the officials.

Charged were R.K. Dhawan, former personal secretary of Mrs. Gandhi, and D. Sen, former director of the Central Bureau of Investigation.

CASTRO PANIC THE DAY U.S. FLEET APPEARED

HAVANA (Reuter) — Reliable government sources said Monday that Cuba put its defence forces on alert last week fearing a possible strike from the United States.

The decision was made, the sources said, as a large U.S. fleet appeared to approach Cuban waters.

The sources said the U.S. at the same time began high-level reconnaissance flights over Cuba to determine whether Soviet-supplied MiG-23 jet aircraft in the Cuban arsenal could carry nuclear weapons.

The episode passed unknown to most people here and only eased when Washington repeated announcements that its fleet, including an aircraft carrier and nuclear submarines, was only taking part in planned manoeuvres.

In the interim Cuba mobilized thousands of troops with tanks. Jet interceptors and anti-aircraft defences were also put on alert, sources added.

Apparently implicit was Cuba's uncertainty over the strenuous reaction by Washington to the presence of the MiG-23s.

The sophisiticated MiGs are fighters and therefore most suitable for defence.

The U.S., however, was apparently worried that an updated version, sometimes known as the MiG-27, might be present on the island. This version is capable of carrying nuclear weapons and might be a violation of the U.S.—Soviet understanding on weapons to be supplied to Cuba.

Such planes could hardly be a threat to the U.S. since Cuba has no possibility of acquiring nuclear weapons, government circles said.

Although Cuba has not renounced the use of nuclear weapons this is largely a formal matter. Its only possible supplier, the Soviet Union, has promised not to supply such arms in Latin America.

HOLDS DENTURES FIRM WITHOUT DAILY "FIXINGS"
Snug Cushions hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks
No more "fixings" every morning with messy powders or creams. Even if dentures need "fixing" after every meal, here's important news. Snug cushions restore dentures' holding power so dentures stay comfortably tight for weeks. Snug, the soft, effective temporary aid, forms a "comfort bond" between dentures and gums. Sticks to dentures, not to gums. Rinse, scrub or soak Snug fresh and clean. Easy to remove, but won't wash off or flake away. So, end daily "fixings". Use Snug to hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks.

Farewell to a Dream

Already the cries of outrage are beginning in response to the report of the McKenzie Royal Commission on the B.C. Railway — cries equally loud from Social Credit spokesmen, such as North Peace River MLA Ed Smith and from the NDP through its leader Dave Barrett. The politicians are horrified that McKenzie and his fellow-commissioners could describe the 1,300-mile railway as a millstone around the province's neck and recommend that it should be sold to the CNR or restructured with huge parts of its operations closed down so that it may run on a strictly-business basis.

Their outrage is not difficult to understand. To longtime British Columbians, the B.C. Railway is not just a money-losing Crown corporation. It is part of a dream, part of the romantic vision that might be considered the closest thing we have to a Great Canadian Dream.

It is the dream of opening up the north, of using Canada's richness and resources to unlock the vistas of the mountains, forests and tundra where few white men have been, to free the timber and mineral resources of that great wilderness to be used for the benefit of all Canadians. It is the same dream that led John Diefenbaker to a landslide victory in 1958, the 20th century version of Sir Wilfred Laurier's vision that opened up the west soon after the turn of the century.

The B.C. Railway has been part of that dream for more than 40 years — since it was officially known as the Pacific Great Eastern Railroad and unofficially nicknamed the Please Go Easy line or the Prince George Eventually railway.

Former premier W.A.C. Bennett embellished the dream in the 1960s when he planned lengthy extensions of the railway through B.C.'s northern wilderness — one stretching up through the Peace River country to Fort Nelson, the other heading into even more remote forests to Dease Lake in northwestern B.C. He painted glowing pictures of the tremendous development opportunities these extensions would bring — entire new networks of mills, mines and towns being carved out of the untouched landscape.

By the time Barrett came to power in 1972, there were already signs the northern parts of the railroad were in serious trouble — lawsuits, derailments, cost overruns, huge operating deficits. But Barrett too chose to continue the northern dream. He offered the offical reason that too much money had been spent already to abandon the extensions now but apparently was actually as captivated by the elusive romance of the railway as had been his predecessor.

With such a history, with such emotional involvements, it is little wonder the commission's recommendations appear hardhearted in the extreme. The dreams die hard.

But the commission's findings pose a brutal question: aside from the dream, is there any justification whatsoever for continuing the railway in its present form?

And the answer must be that there is not.

The old arguments that the railway is a development tool to be used politically in northern development are demolished by the commission's statistics:

- In recent years the BCR's losses have exceeded the total resource revenues the province has received from the plants it serves.
- In 1976, the losses totalled more than the province's entire revenue from stumpage and timber royalties, let alone the revenue from BCR-served plants only.
- The costs of keeping open the Fort Nelson extension will far exceed the total payroll of the two Fort Nelson sawmills that are the only shippers of any size on the line.

And so on.

The commission also explains quite clearly that changes in commercial transportation patterns in the past 30 years mean that it is virtually impossible for the railway to become anything except a money-eating white elephant while it is being run as it is now. Railways are not now the kings of freight transportation they once were; more and more traffic is being switched to roads and to water; railroad transportation is economically competitive only under a few specific circumstances, none of which are met on the BCR, except perhaps on the short stretch of line from Williams Lake to Mackenzie.

What the commissioners are saying, in effect, is that a development railway is no longer a realistic part of the northern dream. They do not comment on the validity of the dream as a whole, but they imply unmistakeably that if the B.C. north is to be opened up, it will be opened up with new highways capable of handling heavy lumber trucks, with new ports on the northern part of the coast, with new pipelines to provide access to valuable natural gas resources. It will not be opened up with low-standard, high-cost rail extensions that run through bogs and over mountain ridges to nowhere.

To give up the tradition of the dream will not be easy. Yet it needs to be done — not only so the taxpayers can stop pouring money into an ever-losing proposition but also so the north can be opened up in the way that best meets the needs of the 20th century.

Perhaps it will hurt less if we realize we are not abandoning the entire shining vision of northern development but only saying farewell to one part of it. That part we can replace with a new concept that, if less romantic, is more likely to ensure that the dream itself can come true.

Personified!

In your editorial regarding Leif Erikson, who discovered America in the days of the Vikings, you quoted that the authorities in the United States described him as a "Norseperson," supposedly to appease the wrath of these oddball characters known as women's libbers. In similar vein, those who preside at meetings are now wont to be described as "chairpersons" rather than chairmen or chairwomen. In the television series Chico and the Man, the landlady expressed a wish to be referred to as a landperson.

It's a wonder these women's libbers don't insist on Manitoba being called Personitoba, the Isle of Man the Isle of Person, the English cities of Manchester and Mansfield to Personchester and Personfield, the Sudanese city of Omdurman to Omdurperson, the Arabian Gulf state of Oman to Operson! What about ombudsman to ombudsperson, German to Gerperson, human to huperson, mankind to personkind, or even woman to woperson! One could go on!

In the U.S. a woman sought to change her surname from Cooperman to Cooperperson but the judge very properly threw the case out. It's high time these crazy women's libbers were told to shut up, be their age and act like normal, sensible human beings!

—Richard D. Corrance, 710 Cormorant Street.

Not Much Fun

I thoroughly agree with Ald. John Mika re: coin-operated animal games planned at Fun City amusement centre.

To many of us it may sound like a horror story but it's more a disgrace to humanity to allow such atrocities to go on this day and age.

Animals are being exploited and abused every day for human entertainment, no matter how low in mentality these animals happen to be. We seem to forget they are all warm-blooded, sensitive and many have been made dependent on us for survival.

To allow these atrocities to exist is a real degradation to all concerned, especially children who have been taught to love and respect these lower forms of life.

Just who is it that really has the fun; to be sure certainly not the innocent victims. — V. Forbes, Victoria.

Thanks, Editor

Can I take upon myself the task of speaking for all those people who have developed a propensity for writing letters to the press?

We all recognize the privilege accorded to us. This is very forcibly emphasized when for any cause this avenue of expression is not available.

There are times no doubt when the editorial pencil erases some of our treasured thoughts, however, the fourth estate with its letters to the editor enables viewpoints to be expressed by many who would be frustrated by their inability to contribute thought and opinion of matters of interest.

Our thanks and appreciation is extended to the publishers and editorial staff of our newspapers. — Omnia Argumentum.

New Military Concept: Civil Defence to Avert War?

By CLAUDE ADAMS

WASHINGTON — In his spacious Pentagon office, the man in charge of U.S. civil defence twirls a squash racket in his hands and admits candidly that American preparations for nuclear attack are almost nonexistent.

Bardyl Tirana, for months the head of the Defence Civil Preparedness Agency with its paltry budget of about $90 million, has been saying this kind of thing for days now, on television and in newspaper interviews.

"We've been asleep for 15 years," he is saying.

As if to underline the point, a 15-foot mahogany conference table across the room is covered with a child's model train set.

Tirana is not passing out any military secrets or jeopardizing national security with his frankness. True, he's off to another job in a month, and as a presidential appointee he is not really answerable to the generals and military technocrats who inhabit that vast conclave called the Pentagon.

But still, the easy candor is surprising.

"We don't have any civil defence in the U.S. True, the public sees fallout shelter signs, they see the sealed biscuit containers, they may know their local directors of civil defence, but these guys only have a peace-time function."

Later he will admit, with somewhat less openness, that not even the U.S. government leadership — congressmen, governors and others outside the presidential circle — have access to emergency shelters.

But the times may be changing. Recently, President Carter announced that he will ask Congress to allocate $1 billion to a program to plan the quick evacuation of 140 million Americans from large cities — the likely first targets of Soviet missiles — should nuclear war break out.

The term for this is "crisis relocation." The idea is not a new one. It has been kicking around since the administration of Dwight Eisenhower.

But the 1978 version of emptying the big cities before the warheads rain down is based on a new premise: that a program of civil defence has as much strategic importance vis-a-vis the Soviet Union as, say, a new missile system or a better bomb.

If nothing else, the Carter initiative will breathe life into an issue that has gathered dust since the last year of President John Kennedy — the issue of civil preparedness.

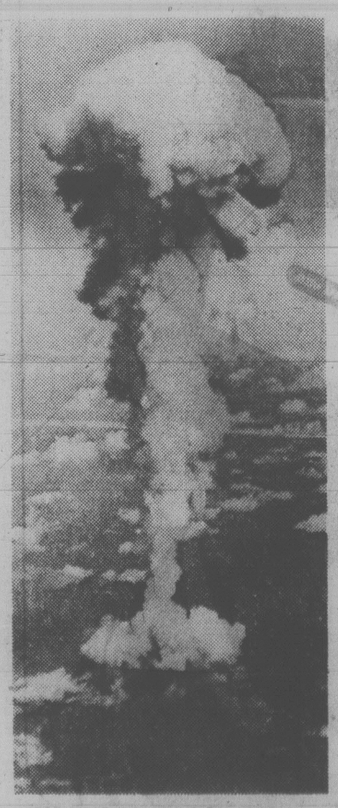
The U.S. has more than 200,000 facilities in cities, towns and villages ready to be used as fallout shelters (not to be confused with blast shelters) in the event of war. But these buildings, mines, caves and tunnels, though still stocked with medical gear, water and geiger counters, are fossils of another era.

Nuclear civil defence in the U.S. dates back to the 1950s, when the fear was prevalent that Armageddon could be triggered by mistake. But since nuclear bombs then would have had to be delivered by bomber, authorities figured that the populace would have enough warning to evacuate the cities.

"If you could get through the Holland Tunnel [in New York] then you'd be pretty safe," Tirana explained.

Indeed, Eisenhower justified spending many billions of dollars on the U.S. interstate highway system on civil defence grounds.

But the advent of guided missiles pre-aimed at their targets changed all that. Kennedy realized that if the Russians launched their ICBMs, citydwellers would have no time to flee. He launched a crash shelter-building program within the cities so that the citizenry would at least be isolated from fallout.



If a nuclear attack happens . . .

Today, nearly all the food in these shelters — hermetically sealed biscuits — has passed its 10-year shelf life and is being disposed of, and much of the unused medicine has lost its usefulness.

Since the shelter craze of the early 1960s, the entire doomsday scenario has changed radically. Nuclear weapons have become not only vastly more numerous, but more efficient and accurate.

The state of the military art has reached the point which politicians and the generals call "mutual assured destruction," or MAD, whereby the two superpowers are quite capable of obliterating themselves in first or second nuclear "strikes."

Precisely-aimed warheads can flatten cities by what is called "overpressure" alone, and flatten the sturdiest blast shelters in the process if the shelters are anywhere near "ground zero."

As one U.S. arms expert noted in a recent interview, 67 American missiles (out of the U.S. arsenal of 11,000) directed systematically at Moscow would wipe out the population, including the thousands huddled in their local shelters.

. . . many Americans will be in this shelter 150 feet beneath the Catskill Mountains in New York.

As a consequence of this sophisticated overkill capacity, the Americans put civil defence on the back shelf as a waste of money and effort. In the last 10 years, a relatively token amount of money, about $900 million, has been spent in the U.S. on nuclear preparedness.

But last year, a frightening new factor emerged. Kremlin-watchers noticed that the Soviets were moving full-speed ahead on civilian emergency programs. In spite of the principle of assured destruction, which is supposed to negate the possibility of global nuclear war, the Russians were spending millions of rubles on blast shelters and evacuation plans.

All Soviet leaders, at every level, could be sheltered, along with as much as a quarter of the work force. A civil defence "army" of 100,000 was in place, ready to swing into action.

Furthermore, the Russians were dispersing their new industries over the length and breadth of the country, and each factory had its own blast-resistant bunker to house an entire work shift.

Experts in Washington sifting through this data speculated that the Soviets were moving toward the conviction that nuclear war was "survivable."

One study showed that, under existing conditions, an American retaliatory strike might kill as few as four million Russians while the reverse — Soviet retaliation against the U.S. — could wipe out nearly a third of the population.

Although many American officials, both in the state department and in the CIA, heatedly challenged this arithmetic and insisted that the Soviet programs were a waste of money, President Carter was impressed enough to take a fresh look at civil defence as a kind of "strategic" weapon.

When Carter, last Sept. 29, quietly signed a presidential directive setting up a new agency to co-ordinate civil defence and spent $2 billion over the next seven years, he in effect adopted the position that the spectre of "mutual assured destruction" is no longer a guarantee against nuclear war.

In the language of the movie Dr. Strangelove the U.S. was faced with a "civil-defence gap."

"What will we do," Tirana was saying in his Pentagon office, "if the Soviets decide to pull off an evacuation of their cities? What if they even threaten it? What if they really think they have the capability to survive a nuclear war?

"Would that contribute to a willingness of the Soviets to risk a localized military conflict?"

Granted that the U.S. could destroy Soviet industry and even many of its military installations, would the country not be able to easily rebuild with the work force that survived?

At the basis of the new Carter initiative to gird Americans for a holocaust is a major deception. Publicly, the administration is saying that under current conditions, cities could be evacuated in time because authorities would know well ahead of time, possibly a week or more, that hostilities were in the offing.

In other words, cities would start emptying when the two superpowers began shouting at one another. By the time all diplomatic efforts had been exhausted and the warheads started flying, the major population centres would be deserted.

But privately, civil defence planners acknowledge that this is inconceivable. If, for example, the U.S. began evacuating New York city, would this not be an ominous signal to the Kremlin? Likewise if the Soviets started to empty Moscow.

In the interview, Tirana stressed that under no circumstances would the U.S. begin to evacuate a major city "unless we knew people were walking out of Moscow and Leningrad."

The key U.S. concern here is to develop a detailed "crisis relocation" plan showing how many Americans could theoretically be saved in so many hours, and then hand this plan to the Russians at the SALT bargaining table.

Meanwhile, American critics of a strategic arms limitation treaty with the USSR, and there are many, would be reassured that the two superpowers are, on paper at least, equally capable of surviving a nuclear war.

Critics of the Carter program argue that what the administration is proposing is "old wine in new bottles" — the concept of large-scale evacuations is stale and ineffective no matter how you package it.

But Tirana disagrees. "The whole idea is to head off a military conflict in the first instance.

"You have to remember that civil defence has never before been thought of in terms of avoidance of war."

Put in its simplest terms, the U.S. hopes by 1985 to be able to say to the Soviets: We could evacuate New York city tomorrow, just as you could evacuate Moscow. We have civil defence parity. Now let's talk about scaling down.

Cubans Getting Stuck In Africa

By JOHN DARNTON
New York Times

NAIROBI, Kenya — In April 1965, a man travelling under a false passport boarded a plane at Havana, his attache-case bulging with books, solo chess problems and inhalers for chronic asthma. For a long time his whereabouts were to remain a mystery. Who would have thought that Ernesto "Che" Guevara was deep in the African jungle?

For eight months, the Argentine-born revolutionary led a detachment of 200 Cuban troops that trained and fought alongside leftist guerrillas battling the regime of Moise Tshombe in the Congo. "That fleeting anonymous passage of Che Guevara through Africa planted a seed that no one could uproot," wrote Gabriel Garcia Marques, the celebrated Latin American author and a Communist.

Years later that seed has germinated into a full and controversial harvest. Last week Foreign Minister Isidoro Malmierca, on the latest of Cuban officials' periodic visits to their African allies, vowed to protect Angola against attacks from neighboring South Africa. "If the borders of Angola were violated," Malmierca said, "we consider it a violation of our own borders."

Cuba's military involvement in Africa bitterly split last summer's conference of non-aligned nations in Belgrade, much as it did an earlier Organization of African Unity meeting. Somalia called Cuba, whose advisers helped direct Ethiopia's offensive against Somali-led secessionists this year, "the policeman of Africa." Cuba struck back, describing some member states as servants of "Yankee imperialism" It was a remarkable showering of attention upon an island nation of only 9.5 million people, and proof that Fidel Castro, an attacked and isolated voice at the 1973 non-aligned meeting in Algiers, is once again a figure to be reckoned with in such councils.

How deeply is Cuba entrenched in Africa? According to State Department figures, there are as many as 45,000 Cubans spread throughout 13 African countries. Nearly 7,000 are non-military personnel, laboring as doctors in Cape Verde, growing sugar cane in Mozambique and the People's Republic of Congo and building schools in Guinea-Bissau.

More conspicuously, however, in addition to its support of Ethiopia and Angola, Cuban soldiers are training Rhodesian guerrillas in Zambia and Mozambique. The Cuban military presence represents more than one-quarter of its armed forces and is far larger than that of any other foreign nation. Twenty thousand soldiers are in Angola alone, and more than 16,000 in Ethiopia.

Cuba emphasizes its historic ties, through slavery, with Africa. "African blood flows freely through our veins," Prime Minister Castro has declared. In general, African countries accept Cuban troops with equanimity. Socialist nations embrace them openly as valuable comrades-in-arms. Many moderate nations buy the argument that they were invited in by sovereign states for territorial protection. Only a few Western-oriented governments such as Zaire, the Sudan and some of West Africa's French-speaking countries voice their fears and suspicions openly.

Technicians follow soldiers To keep clients in power

The Cubans in Africa have cachet. Unlike the heavy-handed Russians, they are more often than not gregarious and sympatico, fellow members of the third world. They are untainted by possible motives of economic exploitation and they inspire identification, as a tiny Caribbean nation that thumbs its nose at a major power.

Equally important is the fact that Cuba has often been, from an African perspective, on the "right" side of disputes. When it supported a Marxist faction in the 1975 Angolan civil war, it found itself fighting South Africa. In rushing to the aid of Ethiopia against Somalia, it was upholding the principle that colonial boundaries must not be crossed.

How long this streak of good fortune can continue is questionable, however, for Cuba's involvement is not without its complications and limitations. These increase as time goes on and as Cuba finds it is not simply aiding in the repulsion of an invasion but keeping governments in power. A case in point is Angola. Almost three years after they first arrived, Cuban troops are still fighting two rival nationalist movements. With the Angolan economy reeling after the departure of 400,000 Portuguese, the Cubans are said to be deeply involved as technicians and bureaucrats in everything from running communications to driving cars.

The Angolan commitment did not prevent the Cubans from sending soldiers to Ethiopia. But now the Cubans are faced with a dilemma over Eritrea. Most Western diplomats believe that the Soviet Union, which lost its Somali base at Berbera, would like nothing better than to see Ethiopia in full control of the rebellious province and its Red Sea ports. On the other hand, Cuba, a long-time supporter of the Eritrean cause and presmably acquainted with the popularity of guerrillas it helped to train, is clearly avoiding full-scale involvement and sticking to supportive chores. During his most recent trip to Africa, in September, Prime Minister Castro reportedly made it clear to the Ethiopians that they could not expect Cubans to bear the brunt of the fighting.

In the Ethiopian strongman, Lieut. Col Mengistu Haile Mariam, the Cubans and Russians are dealing with a hard-line hawk, a man who is perhaps more of a nationalist than a Marxist. Already there have been ideological disputes. Last spring, when Cuban officials were caught dabbling in politics and went so far as to smuggle a long-exiled opponent of the regime into the country, Ethiopia asked the top resident Cuban official and his deputy to leave.

President Castro's recent African journey, in which he met with Robert Mugabe, co-leader of the Rhodesian guerrilla alliance, seemed to portend a deepening Cuban involvement in the Rhodesian war. But unless Cuban forces can somehow disengage from Ethiopia and Angola, it is difficult to see where the manpower could come for an all-out drive against Rhodesia.

There Must Always be Room For Individuality in Society

By KENNETH BAGNELL
Imperial Oil Review

The other evening a man on the radio, who sounded quite young and very confident, was going on at a great rate, saying that we'll all have to get over the quaint idea that life is made better or worse by the influence of individuals — teachers, mothers, fathers or even leaders in high places. We have to come to terms with a new age of history, he kept stressing (he called it a "watershed"), in which human destiny has drifted beyond the influence of individuals and is now directed, willynilly, by bureaucracies, assemblies, councils, and other large, impersonal organizations.

Since this is the situation, he told us, we might as well face it and admit that it is pretty well all over for the notion that individuals wield power anymore. It's just as well anyway, he said (and this seemed to be the heart of his message), because we've given the individual too much say in life, with the result that he sees himself at the centre of the stage. The man on the radio was against all of this and called it by a number of names, all of them big and high-sounding, the most memorable of which was ultra-individuality.

The program did not last long. Perhaps, therefore, the man did not have enough time to explain himself in detail. But he left me wishing that he would go home, have a hot bath, think it over and then come back again sometime for another interview. After all, the subject he was tackling is just a bit less important than the condition of Bobby Orr's knee.

There were some important ideas in what he had to say but, because they were not considered one by one — and instead were put before us like a stew — they did not receive the attention they required. The result of this mixture was that he confused two ideas that are distinct and ought to be kept that way — individualism, and individuality.

The first of these, individualism, is an attitude — some people might call it a style — in which we make ourselves and our satisfactions the goals of life. We may seek to achieve these, not just by surrounding ourselves with the usual symbols and comforts of status — stereo throughout the house, a sporty car or two, a trendy place in the country — but through some of the new movements for self-improvement, those that promise to deliver prowess and success by developing our self-servicing instinct still further. As one recent book promising much of this (Success! by Michael Korda) instructs: "It's O.K. to be greedy . . . It's O.K. to look out for Number One . . . It's O.K. to be Machiavellian (if you can get away with it) . . . It's O.K. to recognize that honesty is not always the best policy . . ."

In the past few years, this kind of individualism has taken great leaps forward, often cashing in on other causes that in themselves are legitimate and deserving, such as the women's movement for equality and group therapies that help people toward understanding themselves and their relation to others. But sometimes these worthy causes are cheapened — or entirely debased — by opportunists who turn them toward mere self-glorification.

I suspect that it is this vain and self-centered style that the man on the radio meant to discredit when he said that we've placed the individual on a pedestal, and it's time he got off. But we have not placed him on a pedestal, not exactly. Some of us, like men and women in every generation, have simply taken the well-trod path to selfishness. That is individualism of a kind, and its harm is that it works against the creation of a genuine human community.

It is dangerous, however, to conclude from this that we have come to the end of the line for the individual's place in society and that he must now be pushed aside in favor of large and powerful groups — corporations, unions, or governmental bureaucracies. Individualism, which is a convenient cover at times for hedonism, is one thing; individuality, which recognizes the unique and precious worth of every human being, is another. It is hardly helpful to have these confused and to be told that there is no longer room for individuality, that it must give up the ghost and become part of mass organization.

It won't work anyway. A few years ago, all across North America, thousands of people, some of them young, some of them entering middle age, launched out on an experiment in living together in communes. They took the view that individuals ought to submerge their own personal lives in some group presonality. In many cases — as with certain religious communities of the last century — this involved a sharing of partners and children. It is now quite apparent that the experiment has not been a shining success. It has not yielded the Utopia its pioneers dreamed of, and most of those who have studied it conclude that the reason is simply that people cannot so easily shed their individuality. "Are the participants prepared to grant the large entity of life of its own, submerging themselves in its rhythms," asks Lawrence Vesey, a social historian and author of The Communal Experience. In the light of the failure rate, he believes the answer is no.

The fact is that if groups are legitimate, they exist to protect individuality against the power of larger institutions, such as the state. Citizen groups, consumer organizations, neighborhood associations, all are the creatures of individuality, called into being as extensions of our longing for survival in the midst of mass society. The man who suggested, therefore, that individuals no longer matter that much and can be bypassed in favor of larger units, did not really understand that the very purpose of the group is to prevent the kind of society he envisions, in which individuals are lost in massive organization.

Perhaps, of course, our feeling that individuality matters, has its birth, not in our fancy or our hope, but in the design of life itself, which is cast in highly individualistic ways. Each one of us has his own set of fingerprints, his own set of features, his own slant of mind and style of personality. At the very heart of life, there is an astonishing individuality.

But mostly this conviction comes, not from arguing over meaning or by examining nature, but through experiences so many of us have had in which our lives have been touched, usually for the better, by another personality. Even in an age like this one, so indifferent to the spirit, it seems natural for me to believe in such people and their abiding influence and to remain convinced that in the long run, it is individuals who matter most.

An Old-Fashioned Sell

By HENRY MITCHELL
Washington Post

I can hear it now, "straw Bear, Straw BEAR," when the fellow in the little wagon was coming down our street selling strawberries.

And there were other cries, of course, for butterbeans and watermelons, and the ragman's cart was pulled by a mule with a hat (his ears sticking through) against the sun, and the tinker banged a great tin pan to signal his readiness for business.

Eh, that was a while back and far away, and I date the general collapse of the standards from the day they lugged off the cypress water trough for the street mules.

Instead, they hung up a tin pail on a pole with a sign that you could get water for the mule at the faucet of the neighborhood gas station. And then (for such is progress) they carried off the pail, too, and we didn't have any more mules or vendors or street cries at all.

Now this was not a heartbreak-type loss. Not the kind of outrage that marshals a common front of protest. It was too trifling a matter to get upset over, and all that happened was a decline of resonance in the daily air.

Our mortal zoo no longer has straw bears.

When television came along, the commercials were ingenious, but hardly the same as a real mule or a real straw bear and I gave up expecting much of them.

One night, in TV's early days, Eleanor Roosevelt took to the tube, to promote cooking — oleomargarine, if memory serves — for the benefit, somehow, of one of those good works she was fond of.

She could charm a slug off a lettuce, and if she had applied herself she had all the makings of the great vendors of my childhood, but of couse it was only a one-shot deal for her on behalf of charity. It did remind me at the time, however, that talent will out.

But then there was the long drouth, as you might say, in which nobody sold anything worth mentioning and I assumed the golden age of salesmanship was done.

Yet now I see the fault was mine, for not detecting the same sweet peddlers, the same sweet cries, with us today only in different guise.

My old school (now as so often in the past my gateway to grand horizons) sent me this Monday a circular that authorized me to buy (for a week's salary) a blue china plate with a raised design on it illustrating the old library down there.

Collectors, the letter said, are all on fire to purchase these plate. But they can't. Not unless they went to my school.

Good. That will show the greedy bastards they can't grab everything.

Only we who went to school there have the honor of buying the plates, though we're on our own when the world's collectors come at us begging to buy one.

I thought little about this until Tuesday when another circular from the school's alumni office arrived, this time announcing I could buy a watch with a genuine gold-plated face with the school library engraved on it.

Of course you feel a bit rueful when it dawns on you the faculty has perceived teaching is not going to work out, really, and has gone into the drygoods field.

But I thought no more about that until Wednesday.

On that day I was honored to receive word of "an historic undertaking" in which I would be permitted to buy a series of gold-plated silver medals of eminent Americans, chosen by our esteemed servant Dr. Henry Kissinger, sometime secretary of state.

Kissinger is quoted to the general effect that his series of medals reflects the spirit, wisdom, high courage, etc., of these great Americans.

What I like best is the democratic nature of the Kissinger-guided program. Unlike the plates and wristwatches offered by my school, that only we band of brothers are allowed to buy, Dr. Kissinger's medals can be bought by anybody whether he went to school or not.

In addition, at no extra cost, Dr. Kissinger's "overview" of the historical significance of Daniel Webster and so on, will be sent along and so will a certificate of authenticity bearing the Kissinger signature.

When the tinker used to come round, it was always his "in additions" service at no extra cost that persuaded us to give him the loose pan-handles to fix. He'd sharpen a knife for you on the side.

Dr. Kissinger is not the only man to have spurts of insight, and it came to me instantly.

We must teach these people melodious cries and give them a mule and put them on our streets.

Along with his unique insights the great secretary has mastered a melodious English, very like the cantaloupe man of our old neighborhood, and my old instructor of Chaucer at school is ideally suited (I always thought, from the beginning) to ride about with a wagon of wrist-watches and plates.

"JefferSON, JefferSON, fine bright JefferSONS," the cry would soar.

And we would all trot out and buy Jeffersons, as we once bought butterbeans, and the wagon mules would wear straw hats and drink out of brand new cypress watering troughs, and the air would ring once more and the lovely past (an historic past, needless to say) would be recaptured in our time.

Legislate Child Rights, Social Workers Urge

Governments must be convinced by public pressure that enshrining rights for children in legislation is the only effective way to deal with child neglect and abuse.

And it is time the B.C. government introduced its human resources ministry to available sophisticated computer methods in order to see the cost savings that would accrue if the emphasis was more on prevention than the cure of social problems.

These were two of the more sweeping comments during an interview with people attending the B.C. Association of Social Workers annual institute during the weekend at The Empress.

Those involved were Shirley Marcuse, co-ordinator of a child abuse program in Calgary; Marjorie Martin of the school of social work at the University of Victoria and a social worker from Vancouver who did not want her named used.

"The whole system is abusive," Marcuse said.

She was referring to an earlier opinion that by not providing enough people or facilities to prevent child abuse or neglect from occurring, the system is actually contributing to the problem.

"There is far more emphasis on providing money for material things — roads and buildings — than for social services."

The social workers are concerned that in this age of budget restraint, the so-called "soft services", money for self-help groups, for example, are the first to go.

Marcuse says there were 240 reported child abuse cases in Alberta last year, but more significantly in her mind, there were 6,000 cases of child neglect, instances where a child didn't get sufficient food, schooling or medical care.

Although child abuse is the higher-profile problem, neglect is more prevalent, she said. And there is no way yet to come to grips with emotional abuse of children.

"A child that is knocked around, I don't think suffers any more than the child that is emotionally abused in terms of how they feel about the family, children . . ."

A social worker from Vancouver says professional people will never be able to come to grips with these problems until governments begin to believe in the importance of giving children certain rights instead of looking on them as chattel.

All emphasized that they are not talking about things like allowing children to vote or other simplistic notions which some have used to ridicule the idea of children's rights in the past.

They are talking about the right to adequate nourishment, clothing, health care, protection and education.

This approach and these sorts of things are what they would like to see form the basis of any children's legislation and which they feel are missing from the B.C. government's white paper on a Family and Child Services Act it proposes to introduce during the spring session of the legislature.

The white paper was released by Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm in September and the deadline for submitting suggestions for improvements is Dec. 31.

There has been some criticism in the Victoria area of the white paper. Some feel it is being railroaded through without adequate time for public response. Others feel that there is not enough emphasis on prevention in the white paper

Marjorie Martin is concerned because all social services would come under the Guaranteed Available Income for Need Act (GAIN).

She said GAIN has to do with welfare and public assistance and many people would feel there is a stigma to seeking any kind of help on that basis.

The Vancouver social worker said a number of Vancouver groups have expressed alarm over the white paper because they feel the proposed legislation is "anti-child." They are concerned, she said, that it does not contain any definition of abuse or neglect.

All agreed that the really puzzling thing is why the government doesn't opt for more emphasis on preventing child abuse and neglect rather than spending more money on curing problems after they occur.

Marcuse said it is possible now for those who are adequately trained to visit maternity wards and detect whether a new mother is a potential child abuser.

There is more public awareness of the child abuse problem, due in part to the number of television dramas on the subject, the social workers said. The problem is, they added, after one of the emotion-packed programs they are flooded with calls for help and there are not enough bodies to cope.

Martin said the government has to get more sophisticated in providing social services.

She said details on the cost of the present system could be fed into a computer along with the cost estimates on a system that focussed more on prevention and the results would show the benefits of a new approach.

"If they can fly over the city at night and detect the heat loss from homes, they can do that much.

"The public has the right to know."

Power Ignorance Scored

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Women in politics are frustrated by their ignorance of the Canadian power structure, the executive editor of Saturday Night said Monday.

Women want to be powerful but don't understand the nature of power and how to acquire it, Christina McCall Newman told the Victoria Men's Canadian Club.

And power — the ability to influence people and get things done — is what politics is all about, said Newman, a political journalist who has just written a book about power and politics.

She said it will take a major change in the attitudes of both men and women before women achieve political equality.

Traditionally, women don't get the necessary social training to survive in politics.

They don't learn how to be agressive or work in groups; instead they learn how to be nice and dependent.

"They rarely go into law or business which are the training grounds for power elites.

"If they are interested in social change they're liable to study philosophy or social work or hang around with a guy who's into Marxism and hash."

But things are changing. Women are starting to grasp the mechanics of power-mongering.

"There are younger women going into the political system now who realize that politics is a career and who are ready to aggressively train themselves for political success," Newman said.

"Some of them have law degrees or business experience. Some of them have become part of political networks formed out of women's groups or from political action movements they've joined."

Women are starting to realize they need confidence, contacts and connections to get high up in the political pyramid.

Newman denied what she called the ancient myth that women aren't biologically suited to political life because they don't have drive and aggression.

"Women are clearly attracted to power — it's just that they have traditionally felt that they had to marry it or get on to it in some other way by associaton."

And women in politics say there is no evidence men want to share power with women.

Newman claimed when women with political moxie begin to show signs of strength, men close ranks.

In Ottawa only three of 28 executive assistants to cabinet ministers are women. Out of 119 special assistants, 49 are women.

In the House of Commons, women occupy 10 out of 265 available parliamentary seats, the largest percentage in Canadian history.

"It's clearly evident that the male power bastions have yet to be successfully stormed."

Women who achieve political power are gossiped about and regarded as sexual objects and if they make mistakes, are attacked by the press and by male colleagues.

Woodward Meatcutters Favor Contract by 92%

Meatcutters at Woodward's stores have voted 92 per cent in favor of accepting a new one-year agreement with the department store chain, a union spokesman said Monday.

George Johnson, a spokesman for the meatcutters' union, said the new agreement gives the 250 meatcutters an extra 51 cents an hour retroactive to April.

Full-time employees will receive an extra 40 cents an hour beginning in January, he said, while part-time workers will get an extra 35 cents an hour. The union retained profit sharing and other benefits on which the company had proposed cutbacks.

The settlement comes after a strike vote in October and intervention by provincial mediator Ken Albertini.

b.c. briefs

Long Term Urged

BURNABY (CP) — Crown prosecutor George Campbell has asked for a 20-year jail term for a man who pleaded guilty to two sex offences, one involving a girl under 14 and the other a boy.

Robert Westover, 36, of Burnaby, was remanded to Dec. 7 for sentencing when he appeared in provincial court Friday. Westover had previously lived in Terrace.

Beefs Premature

The provincial government said Monday that complaints by environmentalists about renewed 2,4-D use in B.C. lakes are premature.

The South Okanagan Environmental Coalition filed a complaint with federal Fisheries Minister Romeo Leblanc, saying the province has applied for a permit to use 2,4-D on Eurasian milfoil weed in Cultus Lake, near Chilliwack.

The coalition asked Leblanc to ban use of the herbicide anywhere in the Fraser River estuary.

An environment ministry spokesman, however, has denied that any permit application has been made for Cultus Lake or anywhere else in the Fraser Valley. He said the ministry has not yet applied for 1979 permits to use 2,4-D in the Okanagan.

Milfoil appeared in Cultus Lake about two years ago, in nearby Hatzic Lake this past summer and is expected to show in the Fraser River itself next summer, but so far 2,4-D has not been used on milfoil in the Fraser Valley.

Fined for Bribery

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver real estate agent was fined $1,000 Monday in provincial court for trying to bribe a Vancouver tax auditor.

Provincial Court Judge Harold Moffat was told that Zdenko Brzovic left $100 in an envelope at the auditor's office Jan. 24 along with other federal tax documentation requested for a routine review of his job expenses.

Two weeks later, after RCMP had been notified, Brzovic was called into tax auditor's office and was asked about the money he had left. He confirmed that it was for the auditor's personal use, court was told.

Conviction Upheld

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia Appeal Court panel on Monday upheld a buggery conviction against Master Corp. Joseph Robert Arsenault of the Armed Forces base at Comox.

Mr. Justice W. R. MacIntyre, heading a panel of a federal and B.C. Supreme Court judges, said that after reviewing the evidence, he could find no reason to dispute the decision of the court martial which found Arsenault guilty.

Arsenault was originally charged with the attempted rape and buggery of a teenage woman member of a Victoria militia unit who was at the Vancouver Island base for a week of scientific training on the base in April, 1977. The rape charge was dropped at the court martial.

Trial Postponed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The trial of two women charged in an incident that led to a hostage-taking at the British Columbia Penitentiary has been postponed to allow the trial to be held here rather than in New Westminster.

Betsy Wood and Gay Hoon, who have both been active in the prisoners rights movement, were charged with attempted murder and aiding an attempted escape after the hostage-taking last January.

The trial had been set for Nov. 27, but Mrs. Wood argued Monday that articles in a New Westminster newspaper had prejudiced her case.

'Won't Do Job'

VERNON (CP) — The director of the British Columbia Cattlemen's Association said Monday cattlemen are suspicious of proposals for a federal farm income stabilization program.

"It would just be another thing they will get involved in that won't do the job," said Jake Hoogendoorn. "They have not proved to us they will ever be able to help us out when we are in trouble."

Bookies Fined

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four persons charged in connection with a bookmaking ring were fined Monday when they appeared in provincial court.

Phillip and Loretta Farrell of Surrey were fined $3,500 each while Gary Wickland and Kay Gillies of New Westminster were fined $1,200 each.

The bookmaking ring operated in New Westminster, Surrey and Vancouver last year. The court was told that the ring made more than $5,000 during last year's Grey Cup.

Escaper Captured

VANCOUVER (AP) — One of three prisoners who escaped last month while being transported to the Washington State Penitentiary is back in custody, authorities said Monday.

Lance Ronald Ruffcorn, 28, of Seattle, was captured by Vancouver police Sunday afternoon in a motel on the city's east side.

Women Urge Pipe Inquiry

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Women's Research Centre has called for a socio-economic inquiry into the effects the Alaska highway pipeline project will have on women and children accompanying pipeline workers to northern construction sites.

The women's group outlined its concerns when it presented a brief to the British Columbia federal Liberal caucus meeting here.

Jean Harrington, a spokesman for the centre, told the caucus that family violence increases when adequate housing is not available. The centre is worried about the lack of planning for family and social services on the pipeline route, she said.

Harrington said that while consideration has been given to the environmental implications the pipeline will have on native people and other groups, women and children have been ignored.

'U.S. Murder Try Faked to Foil Thorpe Scheme'

MINEHEAD, England (AP) — A former member of Parliament testified today that two British Liberal party politicians faked a murder attempt in the United States to dissuade then-party leader Jeremy Thorpe from killing his alleged homosexual lover, male model Norman Scott.

Peter Bessell, a former Liberal MP who now lives in Oceanside, Calif., testified that Thorpe, 49, urged him and banker David Holmes, 48, to lure Scott to the U.S., kill him and dispose of his body in a remote area.

Prosecutor Peter Taylor contends Thorpe had a homosexual affair with Scott early in the 1960s and tried to have Scott murdered out of fear that exposure of the affair would ruin his rising political career.

Thorpe resigned from as party leader in 1976 because of the scandal.

Bessell said he and Holmes flew to the U.S. and pretended to try out a murder plot hoping "it would persuade him (Thorpe) that every effort had been made and the scheme was totally impracticable."

He was testifying on the second day of a hearing to determine if Thorpe, Holmes and two other men should be tried on charges of conspiring to murder Scott, 38. Thorpe also is accused of inciting Holmes to murder Scott. Each charge carries a maximum 10-year jail term.

Bessell, a key prosecution witness who was granted immunity from prosecution, said the conspiracy was born in an encounter with Thorpe at the House of Commons in late 1968.

He described a series of attempts at silencing Scott, which the prosecution said culminated in 1975 with an attack by a hired gunman who killed Scott's dog but left Scott unharmed.

Co-accused John Le Mesurier, 46, and George Deakin, 35, are accused of helping arrange for Andrew Gino Newton to kill Scott for $19,500. Newton served a jail term on weapons charges after the shooting and has not been charged in the conspiracy case.

Bessell testified that after Thorpe suggested disposing of Scott's body in Texas or California, he himself said he was going to Florida and suggested the central part of that state as a suitable place.

In January, 1971, Holmes joined Bessell in Florida and falsely told Thorpe a visa had been obtained for Scott to go to Miami, Bessell said.

"We discussed whether it might be wise for Holmes to go to Chicago, where we both believed weapons were easily obtainable," to make the attempt look more convincing to Thorpe, Bessell testified. "But we decided in the end it was an unnecessary exercise.

"Of course we knew that Mr. Scott was safe in North Wales, that he was not going to Miami and we left it that Mr. Holmes would return to New York and would inform Mr. Thorpe that the plan had failed.

"As far as the murder plan was concerned he (Thorpe) regarded Mr. Holmes and I as incompetent idiots—but since there was no one else to carry out the plan, Mr. Holmes was confident we had heard the last of it."

Soviets Pardon Canadian Woman

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The Soviet Union has pardoned a 52-year-old Canadian woman sentenced to eight years in labor camp on smuggling charges, the Canadian embassy said today.

A spokesman said Asta Sokow, who pleaded guilty last June to attempting to smuggle jewelry, silver, icons, and other valuables, has been pardoned under a special decree of the Supreme Soviet, the country's parliament.

Mrs. Sokow, from Montreal, has been held by KGB security police at Moscow's Lefortovo prison since her arrest last January at Sheremeryevo airport.

The spokesman said the embassy was notified by the foreign ministry today that the decree has been issued but has not yet made contact with Mrs. Sokow to arrange for her departure.

Last July an official Soviet newspaper reported that Mrs. Sokow "tried to take away from the Soviet Union rare pictures, books, items as well as gold, silver and platinum ornaments with diamonds worth over 32,000 rubles (about $47,000)."

Iran Links Disrupted

TEHRAN (Reuter) — Iran's telephone and Telex links with the rest of the world were badly disrupted today for the second successive day because of political action by telecommunications staff.

It was the most evident continuing sign of political disruption in the country, torn by a power struggle for much of the year between the Shah and those who want his overthrow.

The vital oil industry remained hit by sporadic work stoppages, though production rose to 3.7 million barrels today, about two-thirds of normal.

A spokesman for the National Iranian Oil Company said most installations were rapidly returning to normal, except in the administrative headquarters at Ahvaz and the strike-hit Shiraz refinery.

Babies Were Killed First

They would go into convulsions, their eyes would roll upward, they would gasp for breath and then fall dead, Rhodes said.

All the while, Jones was talking to them, urging them on, explaining that they would "meet in another place." Near the end, Rhodes said, Jones began chanting, "mother, mother, mother" — an apparent reference to his wife who lay dead not far from the altar.

Of the 405 members of the community who died, Jones and two others were shot rather than poisoned, according to C.A. Robert, the chief Guyanese police official at Jonestown Monday.

Another who was shot was Maria Katsaris, whose brother, Authony, had come with Ryan Friday to try to persuade his sister to leave Jonestown. Anthony Katsaris was one of those badly wounded during the Saturday massacre that left five dead and approximately 12 wounded.

Rhodes said he managed to escape when the doctor said he needed a stethoscope. Rhodes volunteered to go with a nurse to the infirmary, about 300 feet from the open-air pavillion where the suicides were being carried out.

Rhodes said the armed guards let him through with the nurse and he hid under a building when she went into the doctor's office for the stethoscope. At 7 p.m., when it seemed that the mass suicide had ended, he left his hiding place and walked through the jungle to Port Kaituma, five miles away.

It was Rhodes, according to Roberts, who gave the first hint to Guyanese authorities that hundreds had died in the mass suicide. Rhodes said he had hoped to reach Guyanese officials in time to stop more people from being killed.

Rhodes also recalled Monday that shortly after Congressman Ryan and his party left Jonestown, Jones told his followers that Ryan's plane was going to "fall out of the sky."

The plan, according to Rhodes and other information made available late Monday, was that one of the defectors, who really was a plant on Jones' orders, would shoot the pilot of Ryan's plane after it left the Port Kaituma airstrip.

The person apparently chosen for the task, however, boarded the wrong plane and started shooting before it was off the ground. Two passengers in that plane were badly wounded.

According to Dale Parks, a bona fide defector from Jonestown who was aboard that plane, the man who did the shooting was Larry Layton, a U.S. citizen who so far is the only peson under arrest here n connection with any of the violence.

In addition to the man sent to infiltrate the defectors and shoot the pilot, Jones took the extra precaution of ordering a group of his followers to go to the airstrip in a tractor and trailer loaded with guns, to shoot whoever was not aboard the congressman's plane. The clear intent was that everyone who had gone to Jonestown with Congressman Ryan was to be killed.

The assailants returned to Jonestown and reported, out of the hearing of lawyers Mark Lane and Charles Garry, who had stayed behind, that the congressman was dead but others had lived. It was then that Jones announced that all of his followers must come immediately to Jonestown's open air pavilion, there he told them Ryan had been killed and that there would be "trouble."

"We've all got to kill ourselves," Jones told everyone, according to Rhodes. One woman, Christine Miller, protested, Rhodes said, but the crowd shouted her down."

Monday, a stilled Jonestown looked much as it must have moments after the mass suicide ended two days earlier. The bodies were where they had fallen, the half-empty vat of cyanide-laced Kool-aid was still near the altar in the open air pavilion. The faces of the dead bore the anguished expressions of their terrible deaths.

More than 390 of the bodies were grouped around the altar, many of them arm-in-arm. They were so thickly bunched together that it was impossible to see the ground beneath them.

Even the dogs that lived in Jonestown had been poisoned and now lay dead on sidewalks near the pavilion. The Peoples Temple's pet chimpanzee, Mr. Muggs, had been shot dead.

In Jones' house, approximately 10 others lay dead. C.A. Roberts, the Guyanese police commissioner in charge of investigating the killings, said his men were "finding new bodies in isolated places" throughout the Jonestown property.

A MOONIE RETREAT

COBOURG, Ont. (CP) — The Holy Spirit Association of World Christianity for the Unification of World Christianity — a religious group under the leadership of Rev. Sun Myung Moon — says it has established a religious retreat on 95 acres of land 32 kilometres north of here.

Rev. Martin Porter, a spokesman for the group, said Tuesday the association promotes inter-denominational discussion by operating workshops.

All Power Restored In Wake of Storms

Full power was restored to all users by 7 a.m. today after exhausted B.C. Hydro workers had worked through Saturday, Sunday and Monday, a company spokesman said today.

The final mopping up after the weekend storm was done in Sooke and the Saanich Peninsula.

With all power restored, the spokesman said many temporary repairs will have to be done later more permanently.

The Saanich Peninsula Hospital on Mount Newton Cross Road was one of the casualties during Sunday's storm. The hospital was without power for four hours but was able to keep essential services operating with the use of its standby generator.

A spokesman for the B.C. Telephone Co. said most of their problems were cleared up by Monday.

Port Renfrew was the area most badly affected, residents being without long-distance service until noon on Monday.

Compared to B.C. Hydro's problems, he said B.C. Telephone had been "very, very lucky."

THE time has come, says Michiko Lambertson, co-ordinator of the Inter-Cultural Association, for the majority to stop avoiding the issue and start speaking out for the minority groups in B.C. She says it's only the columnists and other public figures who have a negative view of different races who get the media attention

A Victoria woman who witnessed the race problems in the U.S. says she has seen racism here — subtle and not so subtle

Let's Hear It From the Majority!

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

MICHIKO Lambertson feels it is time the majority group in B.C. and more specifically in Victoria took a strong, public stand against a growing attack on minority cultural groups.

She is co-ordinator of immigrant services for the Inter-Cultural Association of Greater Victoria and in that capacity has seen examples of racisim in the city, some of it subtle, some not so subtle.

It reminds her of the early 60s in Chicago where she had come from Japan to get her masters degree in sociology.

During those years of turmoil when blacks rose up in anger over their place in American society, white people really took a stand, she said in a recent interview.

"They spoke up in favor of the minority group."

That is not happening in B.C. today, says Michiko, who came to Victoria seven years ago. It is only the newspaper columnists and other public figures who have a negative view of different races who get any media attention.

"There is nothing from the majority, who really should stand up and say something.

"I think people are really trying to avoid the issue."

Aside from her immigrant services duties, Michiko also heads up the Multi-Cultural Women's Group, formed in January to help immigrant women adjust to a new culture as well as act as an advocate in cases of injustice or discrimination.

There is a core group of about 30 volunteers, women from a smorgasboard of cultural backgrounds, who are available to help out with any problems.

Included in Victoria's melting pot of various cultures are Chinese, East Indians, Filipinos, Spanish, Portuguese and those from the Latin American countries.

The women's group tries on the one hand, to help the immigrants get to know the Canadian culture as well as show them how they can share their culture with others.

Michiko, and others interviewed on the work of the women's group, said if such assistance is not available, newcomers to the country tend to isolate themselves with other members of their culture instead of adjusting to their new one and sharing what they have with others.

Aside from the general adjustment problem there are also individual problems, like finding homes and jobs for immigrants or helping out in cases of physical handicaps or marriage breakdown where there is a cross-cultural marriage.

Buncy Pagely, born in Victoria but with East Indian ancestry, says she sees a definite improvement in the last little while as a result of the work of the women's group and the inter-cultural association.

She says five to 10 years ago there were few services for immigrant women and as a result those of different cultures "would remain isolated and just stay with their families."

The women agree that the way to combat racism or cultural bias is through communication, getting people together on a one-to-one basis in order to dispel the various stereotypes one group has about another.

Janis Kirker, secretary for the inter-cultural association, says the beauty of mixing with people from all different cultures is that the stereotypes soon disappear and people "become just persons."

The strange feature of our society is that people tend to tolerate intolerance, she says, rather than be intolerant of intolerance.

The current swing toward racial intolerance, the women agree, is due in part to the tough economic times and the unemployement situation. This is something that has happened down through history, they add.

"We see that kind of thing when times are tough and competition for jobs is great," says Janis.

And Victoria has its share of racists as well.

Sometimes it rears its head more obviously in the form of hate literature or racist slogans. Or in the form of public petitions, like the one taken in the Uplands area protesting the efforts by a family from a minority group to buy a house in the area.

There is also discrimination in the sale of houses and the renting of accommodation but these cases are more difficult to prove.

But it's there and the only way to combat it is by education, particularly in the early school years, the women agree, as well as with groups like theirs which attempt to bring together people from different cultural backgrounds and help them understand the positive side to having a mix of cultural backgrounds in the community.

Michiko says it is time people stopped giving lip service to racial tolerance and multi-culturalism and begin to come out in public with strong, positive attitudes about the mix of people in the community.

Changes Urged To Boost Voting

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier and Greater Victoria school board chairman Susan Brice both believe legislative changes are needed to stimulate better voter turnout in local elections.

But whereas Couvelier wants the right to punish non-voting electors by having their names removed from the voters' list, Brice says the provincial education ministry must recognize the difficulty created in a school district whose component municipalities hold unsynchronized elections.

Saturday's municipal election and referendum in Saanich attracted a 23.3 per cent turnout, but in the school board election in Victoria only a dismal 4.8 per cent of eligible voters cast ballots for school trustees.

The over-all turnout for the school board election was 15.4 per cent.

Brice said today the disappointing Victoria figure was entirely predictable.

"I could see this coming a mile off," she said. "You didn't have to be a political whiz-kid to predict it."

She recalled that when Victoria city council decided two years ago to scrap annual elections in favor of the biennial pattern, she suggested the school board investigate the feasibility of doing likewise.

But when she inquired at the education ministry she was told it couldn't be done due to the different voting frequencies between the municipalities in the district.

The only candidates eligible would have been those living in the city of Victoria, because Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt would still be holding annual elections.

"We (trustees) are elected at large, and the change would have given us in effect a quasi-ward system," Brice said.

She said the ministry indicated at that time it had no plans to change its policies in line with the trend toward biennial elections.

Couvelier said Monday the deletion of non-voters' names from the list would require a change in the Municipal Act.

"It would cause people some inconvenience getting their name back on the list and make them realize the importance of exercising their democratic right."

He said he also believes more voters would go to the polls if election day were held midweek instead of the traditional Saturday.

Poison Dumping Blamed In Death Of Coho

Federal fisheries officers suspect a poisonous substance dumped into Craigflower Creek wiped out this year's coho run.

About 30 coho salmon were found Monday floating in the creek near Helmcken Road bridge.

"We have ruled out lack of oxygen," said Barry Huber of the federal fisheries protection branch.

"We conducted tests and the oxygen content of the water was adequate to support fish."

He said some of the fish have been sent to the fisheries research station in Nanaimo to try and pinpoint the cause of death.

The fish were found not far from Portage Inlet.

Huber said the coho, full of eggs, were apparently on their way to spawning grounds higher up Craigflower.

He said there was no sign that other species such as cutthroat trout were killed.

MOTORCYCLIST DIES

A Victoria man died Monday afternoon in Royal Jubilee Hospital from injuries received in a motorcycle accident Friday night.

James Corbett, 28, of 3005 Shakespeare, was thrown 100 feet when his bike collided with a car at Bay and Fernwood.

Corbett never regained consciousness.

Victoria police are seeking witnesses to the crash which took place about 11:15 p.m.

Vantreight Refuses To Resign

Saanich Ald. Geoff Vantreight says he will not resign his council seat or step down as bylaw enforcement committee chairman because his sons technically trespassed on municipal property in building an unauthorized drainage basin at Panama Flats.

Talking to reporters after Monday night's council meeting, following his return from a holiday in Hawaii, he said: "I've done no wrong, why should I resign?"

He denied that he had broken any municipal bylaws or used his elected office in any way to further his own interests.

Vantreight left on vacation two weeks ago, soon after admitting that his sons Ian and Michael had built the concrete drainage basin on municipal land without permission, to prepare for a potato farming operation they hope to start next spring.

During the alderman's absence last week several council members including Mayor Mel Couvelier strongly criticized his involvement in the affair, and said his conduct had been unethical.

But Vantreight insisted Monday night that in meeting council colleagues on his return they had not repeated the comments "to my face."

He issued a lengthy press release deploring the "unwarranted attacks on my and my family name," and providing further information on the background to the affair.

Among other facts Vantreight noted that the municipal property at Panama Flats (near Interurban and Hyacinth) has been zoned as farmland for some time but has not been farmed because of flooding problems.

It was common knowledge that Saanich wanted to rent the land. When his sons contacted municipal officials with that in mind they were led to believe municipal cooperation would be forthcoming.

"The municipal officials indicated that approval would likely be a formality as the proposal complied with municipal planning for this area. My sons therefore proceeded," he said.

Vantreight stressed he was not "trying to get anyone from Saanich municipality in trouble" and did not believe there should be any criticism of their conduct.

He continued: "The unfortunate fact is that farmers have to move quickly if they are to get their land in shape for spring planting. My sons did not have time to tie up all the loose ends. Potatoes don't understand red tape and neither do farmers!

'Their First Venture on Their Own'

"Throughout my sons' actions I was kept aware of what they were doing, and in fact assisted them where possible. I was giving them the benefit of my knowledge and experience in what was going to be their first venture on their own."

Vantreight said his sons submitted an offer to lease the municipal land on which the drainage basin had been built, and provided a deposit.

But as it could appear their father as an alderman would be receiving an indirect benefit, in violation of the Municipal Act, municipal officials advised them to withdraw their application to rent the property.

"By this time, the ditches had been built and the cement structure was in place."

(Council was informed last week that construction work on the basin was carried out Oct. 23, two days before Ian and Michael Vantreight submitted the offer to rent the municipal land).

Vantreight commented in the press release on the irony that, far from receiving preferential treatment, his sons may be prevented from using farmland to grow potatoes because their father is an alderman.

"If they were just ordinary citizens, it is likely that everything would have gone ahead, they would have been able to enter into a lease with Saanich and this whole controversy would not have arisen."

He said he hoped Saanich citizens would judge the project objectively, and not be overly influenced by the "'head hunting' which is currently going on."

Vantreight told reporters he would resign only if Saanich decided to lease or rent the land to his sons, so that he would comply with the Municipal Act's prohibition against an elected representative having any direct or indirect contract with the municipality in question.

But in that case, he said, he would transfer the land title and run in the byelection created by his resignation.

Big Max Attack Gave Them Bellyache

TOWN TALK

Low and behold . . . or should that be Low and begone?

For the first time since the Memorial Arena opened in 1948 there'll be no Ice Capades show this pre-Christmas season.

And it's all your fault, Max Low, for saying those nasty things about the show in your Times column last year.

At least, that's the explanation given by Memorial Arena box office staff to a disappointed resident who tried to book seats this week.

They're kidding, surely? But no, according to city recreation manager Jack Morgan the Big Max Attack of last December is the reason given by the company for not coming to Victoria this year.

"They were very hostile about the article . . . he called them bush league and said so much in the column that was not true," Morgan said.

But what's the real reason?

Morgan does concede that the Ice Capades' net take from Victoria has dwindled in recent years due to increasing costs, although he denies the fans had been deserting.

"I guess it was a tough struggle coming to Victoria in the last three or four years, and that (Low's article) seems to have been the last straw."

Dirty washrooms. Shabby stations. No information available about schedules. Sound like a description of affairs on the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway?

Wrong. It's the McKenzie royal commission describing passenger service on the province's own railway, the BCR. A Vancouver Islander notes some remarkable similarities between the E & N and the BCR in their passenger operations. Both use self-propelled Budd cars and while the BCR operates on roughly twice as much track, the complaints heard about one apply equally to the other.

Commission researcher Kenneth Bayne reported on the BCR:

"Frequency and reliability, equipment, terminal facilities and on-board services have fallen far behind that offered by competing modes, making rail passenger service undesirable as a method of travel."

And more on the BCR . . .

The Socred government dropped the massive four-volume, long-awaited royal commission report on the railway at 4:26 p.m. Friday and cabinet ministers have been hard to find ever since.

Government politicians had the entire weekend to analyse it but as of today, not one cabinet minister could be found to talk about the report and its "dump-the-BCR" recommendation.

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, whose South Peace River riding relies heavily on the railroad, was conveniently on holiday.

Premier Bill Bennett, who's minister of transport and who overruled an earlier interim recommendation of the commission that the Fort Nelson link be shut down, was just back from vacation and too busy to see reporters, said mother hen (press secretary) John Arnett.

Yet the premier found time Monday to issue a press release taking most of the credit for the turnaround decision that will see passenger service continued on the E&N.

Could it be that the royal commission is so highly critical of the government-run railroad, it has driven the cabinet into hiding until ministers can figure out some answers?

There's nothing like a first-hand look at the consequences to get the seat-belt idea across.

Students at the University of Victoria and Victoria high school will get an opportunity this week to view the Insurance Corp. of B.C.'s seat belt convincer.

The convincer — a crash simulator which depicts the effectiveness and importance of seat belts — will be at the university Wednesday and the next day at Vic High.

Too Hot to Handle

A frank speech about women in the Canadian political system by Saturday Night executive editor Christina McCall Newman Monday proved a little too strong for the Victoria Mens' Canadian Club.

Needy Bill Now Law

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate, stung by government and opposition criticism that it failed to act quickly last week, Monday rushed through legislation increasing and extending payments to the needy elderly.

The bill was given royal assent and became law late Monday night.

However, senators took the time to rebuke the Commons first, insisting that any blame for a delay rested squarely on the shoulders of MPs, not senators.

The controversy started last week when the Commons suddenly agreed to suspend other work and give the bill rapid passage. It had been before MPs since Oct. 16.

The bill has two purposes:

— It increases by $20 a month the guaranteed income supplement for 1.3 million poor Canadians beginning Jan. 1.

— It changes a situation whereby an allowance paid to spouses of needy pensioners is stopped immediately upon the death of the pensioner. The pension now will be extended to the spouse, usually the wife, for six months after the death of the pensioner.

Both measures were announced in late summer as part of the government's reshuffling of its spending plans.

The Senate recommended that the government introduce an amendment as soon as possible to make the bill retroactive to Nov. 1 in order to make eligible those who lost a spouse since that date.

Conservatives in the Commons have already indicated they would support such a move.

The spouse's allowance extension has been criticized as only a stop-gap plan that does not go far enough. It is paid to a poor person between the age of 60 and 65 whose spouse receives an old age security pension.

The guaranteed income supplement is a means-tested payment to about half the recipients of the old age security benefits of $159.79 monthly. It goes to everyone 65 and older.

The bill will increase the supplement by $20 a month Jan. 1. This figure is the same for a couple or for a single person, regardless of the amount of the supplement they already receive.

ROUND 3 FOR SPLIT WIVES

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada will make a third attempt next year to decide the property rights of wives who are divorced or separated from their husbands.

As the law now stands a divorced wife can claim as much as half a share of the property acquired in her husband's name during their marriage.

The law is based upon a recent Supreme Court of Canada decision in the appeal of Helen Rathwell. It ruled in a five-to-four split that she was entitled to a half-share of 2,040 acres of farm property in Tompkins, Sask.

Mr. Justice Brian Dickson, speaking for the majority of the nine-man court, said he based his decision on the fact that Mrs. Rathwell contributed money and labor to build up the farm property.

That ruling now is being challenged by Lothar Pettkus, owner of a bee-keeping business near Hawkesbury, Ont.

He questions whether judges can determine property rights of wives when there is no evidence of property agreements between husbands and their spouses.

Pettkus also challenges whether courts can order equal division of the property when one of the parties contributed more to acquisition of the property.

Lawyers for Pettkus told the court there is still confusion over the property rights of divorcees or separated wives.

He said the case of Irene and James Murdoch in 1973, which was decided by a four-to-one majority, found that wives, in the absence of a written contract, have no claims on property acquired in the husband's name.

But two years later the Supreme Court in a narrow five-to-four decision in the Rathwell case, ruled judges can establish there is a "constructive trust" leading to an equal division of assets acquired during the marriage.

There is a need for the Supreme Court to make a definitive ruling and clear up any confusion in such property settlements, the court was told.

Chief Justice Bora Laskin, lone dissenting voice in the Murdoch case, agreed there could be a need for a new decision in the issue.

Mr. Justice Dickson, who wrote the Rathwell decision, agreed.

The court was told Monday that Pettkus and Rosa Becker lived together as man and wife for almost 20 years except for a short separation.

At that time, Rosa Becker brought a court action seeking a one-half interest in the assets of Pettkus.

Evidence was that she supported Pettkus from her wages as a factory worker for five years, allowing him to save $13,000 to buy a farm and start a bee-keeping business.

In a trial held at L'Orignal, Ont., the judge ruled that Rosa Becker was entitled to 40 beehives without bees and $1,500 representing a two-year revenue from that number of hives.

But the Ontario Court of Appeal reversed the decision, saying she was entitled to a half-interest in the property and half the revenue from the business from the date of their separation.

The Supreme Court review of the appeal isn't expected to be held until early next year.

Jan. 1 Energy Hike Coming, Unless . . .

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumers may have to face some oil price increase early next year — even if not a full three cents a gallon — as a result of current negotiations between Ottawa and Alberta.

Federal Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie says that as far as he is concerned it is "all or nothing" in talks with the province on federal proposals to skip a Jan. 1 increase of $1 a barrel in the price of crude oil.

But federal officials say privately that at some point in the talks it may become necessary to accept a compromise on price, something between nothing and the $1 figure negotiated 18 months ago.

It is also possible, they say, that the ministers will negotiate a longer-term deal, covering further increases in later months.

A $1-a-barrel increase in crude prices Jan. 1 would result in about an additional three cents a gallon on the cost of gasoline or home-heating oil when it passes through the system to consumers by March 1.

The federal government failed last week to garner support from the other provinces for its proposal to cancel the next price increase. General reaction from the provinces is that a deal is a deal and Ottawa should let the increase go ahead.

The price decision now will be negotiated between the federal and Alberta governments in talks expected to resume in early December.

A central issue in those discussions will be what value to place on the beleaguered Canadian dollar when comparing prices here and in the United States.

Compensation Missing Mark?

FREDERICTON (CP) — Compensation programs may offer workers financial incentives to work carelessly, says the assistant general manager of the Ontario Safety Association.

Robert Litster said Monday a study shows that tax-free compensation payments to an Ontario worker disabled for six months give him an income of about $600 more than usual if he normally earns $15,000 a year and pays full taxes.

Litster also said that compensation is "no-fault insurance . . . which quickly becomes no-responsibility insurance" and little attempt is made to identify the cause of accidents.

He told the annual meeting of the New Brunswick Industrial Safety Association that in 1976 a total of $200 million was paid out in compensation for injuries to parts of the body that should be protected by safety equipment.

Problems with safety equipment when it is used include inadequate assessment of eye-safety equipment and widely varied standards in other equipment such as safety boots, not all of which are safe for all jobs, he said.

Meanwhile, Robert Sass, associate deputy minister of labor in Saskatchewan, said many marital problems and much drug and alcohol abuse can be traced to frustrations people face at work.

He said personal problems caused by stresses on the job, such as shift work, show up in the home long before they can be detected in the work place.

Shift work has a disruptive influence on family life and can contribute to headaches, ulcers, heart disease and other problems, he said.

Car Mishap Damages $800,000

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — A child totally disabled after being struck by a car when he was four years old and his parents were awarded a total of more than $800,000 in a New Brunswick Supreme Court judgment released Monday.

Michel Dupis, now 5, of nearby Scoudouc, N.B., was awarded $762,500 and his parents, John and Marie Dupis, were awarded $38,809.19.

Testimony at the trial held earlier revealed the Supuis boy, who was unconscious for 2½ months and spent 10 months in hospital after the May, 1977, accident, will never walk again.

A neurologist's report also the boy's hands are uncordinated. He is just beginning to speak single words or short phrases and is subject to epileptic fits, it said.

GM REPORT CORRECTION

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Press distributed an erroneous report that General Motors of Canada Ltd. plans to reduce sticker prices on cars currently on dealer lots.

The company announcement was that the price reduction, averaging $170, would be applied on cars ordered on or after Nov. 17.

The report published Saturday, also was erroneous in saying the reduction would affect about 120,000 unsold GM cars. The 120,000 is the number of unsold cars in the industry, not just GM.

Burglary Penalties Too Stiff: Researchers

TORONTO (CP) — Penalties for burglary should be reduced because the crime usually is committed without violence by young amateurs, say researchers who have studied the subject for two years.

The researchers said fear of burglary may be as damaging to society as the crime itself.

The study also concluded that burglary frequently is not reported to police, that the value of property stolen usually is small, that thieves rarely are caught and that victims often do not take precautions to prevent repeat break-ins.

Researcher Irvin Waller and his assistant, Norman Okihiro, based their conclusions on 5,000 Metropolitan Toronto police reports and interviews with 1,600 householders.

Waller and Okihiro did the study for the University of Toronto Centre of Criminology. Their 110-page report, called Burglary: The Victim and the Public, was released Monday by University of Toronto Press.

They said the threat of breaking and entering, unlawful entry and theft has been blown out of proportion in the mind of the public.

"Some reduction in this fear might be achieved by more frequent publicity of the peaceful nature of residential burglary," the report said.

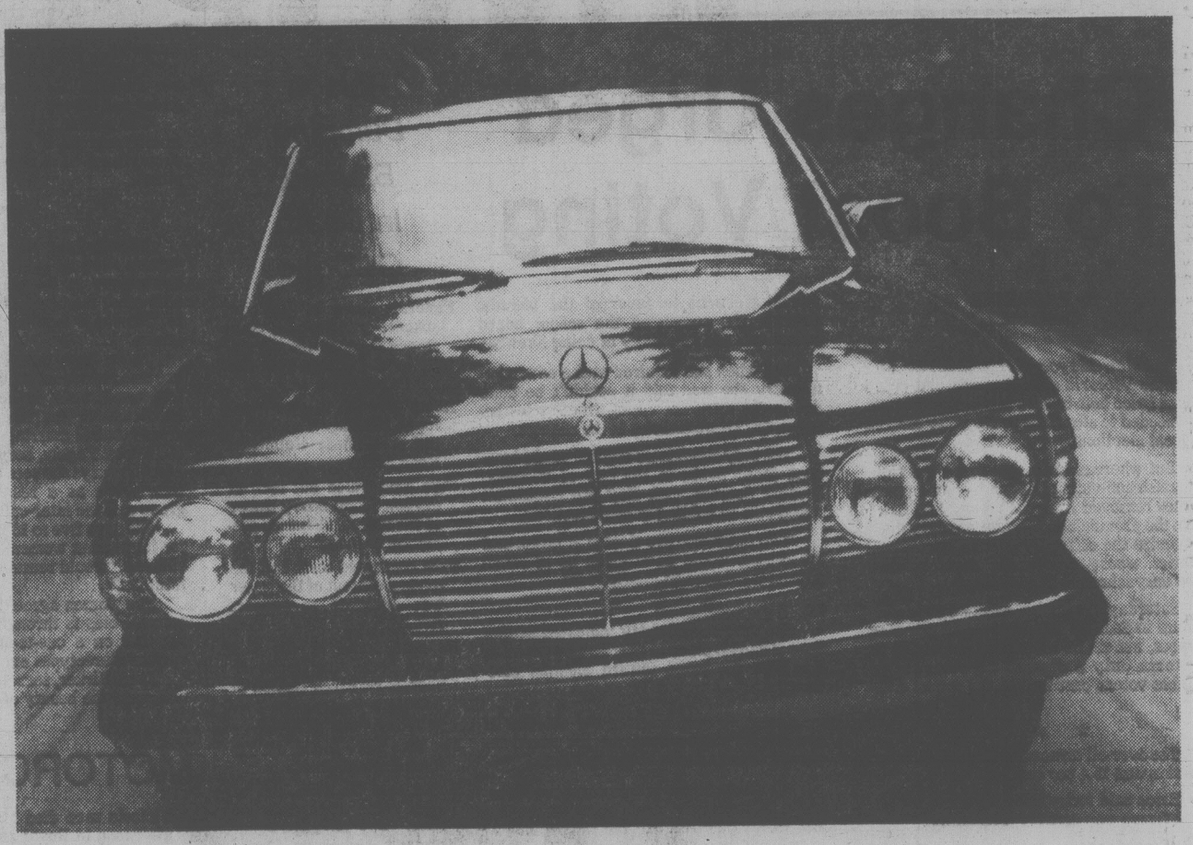
The researchers said the maximum penalty for breaking and entering a house, life imprisonment, contributes to its being blown out of proportion.

"We can de-dramatize most burglary by reducing the penalty," Waller said.

The researchers recommended Criminal Code amendments that would have a burglar charged with an indictable offence only when there has been a threat of physical injury or loss or damage of $200 or more.

Anything less should be considered a summary offence requiring restitution and a fine to act as a deterrent, the report said.

The researchers also said too much valuable police time is spent investigating minor burglaries.



In 1981, this Mercedes-Benz will likely command nearly 90% of its original price.

A Mercedes-Benz holds its value for the very same reasons that make it a valuable purchase in the first place: Performance. Engineering excellence. Safety. Comfort. Timeless styling.

Right now, the average resale price of a three-year-old Mercedes-Benz is nearly 90% of its price when new. Even after five years, which is not long in the life of our cars, a Mercedes-Benz still commands over 60% of its original price.

What is true now, will be true tomorrow. Because a Mercedes-Benz is built to be here today—and here tomorrow.

Which gives you one more reason to consider a new Mercedes-Benz: Its investment value.

A Mercedes-Benz is engineered like no other car in the world.

PCs, New Democrats Clash over Budget

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservatives and the New Democratic Party both attacked finance minister Jean Chretien's budget Monday, but differed sharply in their recommendations for improving it.

Opposition Leader Joek Clark accused the government of having an insatiable desire to take over private businesses.

"You just want to keep your hand in everything that moves," Clark told Chretien during Commons debate on the budget.

A Conservative government would release the government's grip on the private sector and allow free enterprise to restore prosperity to the country, he said.

New Democrat David Orlikow (Winnipeg North) accused the government of adopting the Manitoba conservative government's style of budget restraints and public service cuts.

This will only increase unemployment and inflation at a time when the government should be stimulating the economy, he said.

Clark used his hour-long speech on the budget to outline his party's platform for the general election next spring.

A Conservative government would divest the government of Petro-Canada, its $1.5 billion energy corporation, and would examine whether the 385 other Crown corporations should be state-run.

Clark said the government's intrusions into the private sector rob old age pensioners and those who need homes of much-needed help and channel tax dollars into activities in which the government's performance record leaves much to be desired.

The recent $1.4 billion acquisition of Pacific Petroleums Ltd. by Petro-Canada was a classic case of government moving in where it did not belong.

Many nations have state-owned oil companies, Chretien interjected during Clark's attack.

"Other countries have monsoons and state police agencies and censorship too," Clark shot back. "Just because other countries have them, it doesn't mean they should exist here."

He said a Conservative government would reduce government spending by deliberately not replacing government employees whose jobs become vacant through death, transfers, promotions, firings or resignations.

If he were prime minister, Clark said, he would establish five-year government spending and money-collecting plans.

His government would also give a tax credit of up to $5,000 for Canadian business prepared to innovate.

Clark said Chretien's budget sentences Canada to a year of greater unemployment, inflation as bad as or worse than the current levels and a deficit of more than $12 billion.

"The over-all effect will be stagnation as usual," Clark said.

Orlikow agreed it was a "stand-pat budget with no new policy directions." The only group in the country pleased with it is big business, which has gained a number of concessions from the Trudeau government, he said.

Long-term prospects for the Canadian economy are "disastrous" because it is a branch-plant division of foreign multi-national corporations, Orlikow said.

New government programs are urgently needed to provide jobs for the more than one million people who will be out of work this winter, he said.

Two companies attacked by Clark, Petro-Canada and the Export Development Corporation, are examples of "shining initiative" by Crown corporations, Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais said.

These corporations are important for Canada's future, he said. Canada was the only country that could hope to achieve energy self-sufficiency. And it had advantages in foreign trade over all of its competitors.

Chretien's Calculator Out?

TORONTO (CP) — Several economists said Monday that Finance Minister Jean Chretien has seriously underestimated the amount of money the government will need to borrow this year and in 1979 to pay for its spending programs.

Chretien estimated in Thursday's federal budget that the government's total borrowings for the fiscal year ending next March will be about $12.1 billion and that borrowing would drop to $10.8 billion in the 1979 fiscal year.

However, a spokesman for Midland Doherty Ltd. estimates that federal cash needs this fiscal year will be about $13 billion.

He said they could rise to $15 billion next year, depending on the extent of the economic recession the firm expects.

Wood Gundy Ltd. estimated that Ottawa's borrowings will amount to $12.6 billion this fiscal year and $11.5 billion next year.

An analyst for A. E. Ames and Co. said Chretien's economic projections for 1979 "look definitely to be on the sunny side."

OIL FIRM TAKEOVER FUNDS SET

CALGARY (CP) — Petro-Canada has secured $1.25 billion in U.S. currency from three Canadian chartered banks, enough to finance its 100-per-cent ownership of Pacific Petroleums Ltd., the president of the federal oil company said Monday.

W. H. Hopper said in a prepared statement that Petro-Canada secured the funds from Royal Bank of Canada, Bank of Nova Scotia and Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce through the issue to them of preferred shares by its subsidiary, Petro-Canada Exploration Inc.

Hopper also announced that arrangements already have been completed to increase Petro-Canada's holdings in Pacific to 53 per cent. Petro-Canada acquired 48 per cent of Pacific's common shares from Pacific's Parent Company, Phillips Petroleum of the United States.

NDP Motion Defeated

OTTAWA (CP) — A New Democratic Party want-of-confidence motion that condemned what it said is a government policy of high unemployment was easily defeated in the Commons Monday night.

The vote was 11 New Democrats against 192 Liberals, Progressive Conservatives and Social Crediters.

The Conservatives voted against the motion because it amended one of theirs, eliminating condemnation of government nationalization of industry.

The Conservative motion will be voted on Wednesday as the debate on the budget presented by Finance Minister Jean Chretien last week continues.

HOUSING CHANGES

OTTAWA (CP) — The government plans soon to introduce changes to federal housing legislation in the Commons, Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen said Monday.

He made the statement in reply to Andrew Brewin (NDP-Toronto-Greenwood) who said the legislation is needed quickly to ensure that municipalities have funds for neighborhood improvement, housing, sewage and other activities. Otherwise, Brewin said they will have to raise city taxes.

An urban affairs department spokesman said the bill will be put before MPs sometime before Christmas, perhaps this month.

It would contain a series of proposals that Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet has discussed with the provinces. Generally, the bill would reduce the commitment of federal capital funds for housing programs.

Social Bill Cancelled, Begin Says

TORONTO (CP) — Monique Begin, federal health and welfare minister, says a bill that would have given provinces more freedom to decide what they would do with money for social service programs has been cancelled.

The bill, called the Social Services Financing Act, would have meant provinces would receive lump-sum payments from the federal government with no strings attached.

Miss Begin said Monday she announced the federal government decision at a meeting of federal and provincial welfare ministers. But she refused to comment further.

The bill was tabled in the House of Commons in May, but it died on the order paper in September and was never re-introduced.

Child Abuse Attack Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MPs urged the government Monday to toughen Criminal Code sections dealing with the beating of children by parents.

Eldon Woolliams, Conservative justice critic, said in the Commons existing legislation dealing with child abuse allows for a reasonable use of force by parents without providing any protection for children.

Claude-Andre Lachance, Lang's parliamentary secretary, replied that Criminal Code amendments introduced during the last session of Parliament would soon be re-introduced.

U.K. Prices Rise 7.8%

LONDON (AP) — Britain recorded an annual inflation rate of 7.8 per cent in October, unchanged from September, the employment department announced Friday.

It was the seventh successive month that the retail price index has remained at or below eight per cent, in line with Labor government predictions that inflation rate would stay around eight per cent the rest of this year.

But Prices Secretary Roy Hattersley warned that inflation is bound to go up in the coming year if trade unions persist in demanding wage settlements in excess of the government's five-per-cent wage guidelines.

PRICE REDUCED

TORONTO (CP) — Noranda Saels Corp. Ltd., the selling arm of Noranda Mines Ltd., has announced an immediate domestic price reduction for electrolytic copper cathode to 81 cents a pound from 83 cents. For electrolytic copper cathode sold in the United States the price was cut to 69 cents in U.S. funds from 71 cents. The premium for electrolytic copper wirebars remains

Ottawa Players Dominate EFC Stars

By The Canadian Press

Conredge Holloway was slightly miffed that Ottawa head coach George Brancato didn't use him Sunday when the Rough Riders fell behind and eventually lost their Eastern Football Conference final, 21-16, to Montreal Alouettes.

The 24-year-old Holloway, in his fourth year with the Riders, got a measure of satisfaction today when he was named the EFC all-star quarterback.

Holloway was named to the all-star position by a decisive margin over Tom Clements, the man who started most of the Riders' games this season and went all the way in Sunday's loss to Montreal.

The all-star team was picked by members of the Football Reporters of Canada who regularly cover the four EFC teams. The Western Conference team is to be announced Wednesday.

Clements, the 1977 Eastern all-star at quarterback, started most of Ottawa's games this season, but alternated with Holloway in most games and the two finished the season with almost equal statistics.

Holloway completed 132 of 214 pass attempts for a .617 percentage and 1,970 yards gained. He threw for 12 touchdowns and had only two passes intercepted. Clements completed 152 of 239 attempts for a .636 percentage, 1,990 yards, 17 touchdowns and had 12 intercepted.

Holloway was among 11 Rough Riders named to the 26-man Eastern all-star team that included punter Ken Clark of Toronto Argonauts and placekicker Don Sweet of Montreal Alouettes.

Ottawa team-mates named to the offence were running back Mike Murphy, wide receiver Jeff Avery, slotback Art Green, tight end Tony Gabriel for the seventh straight year, centre Donn Smith, guard Charlie Brandon and tackle Jim Coode.

Joining the Ottawa offensive landslide were running back Jimmy Edwards and guard Larry Butler of Hamilton Tiger-Cats and wide receiver Bob Gaddis and tackle Dan Yochum of Montreal.

While Rough Riders dominated the offence, Montreal was equally prominent on the defensive unit with six players named to the 12-man squad.

Alouettes' corner back Dickie Harris was named for the sixth year in a row while outside linebacker Chuck Zapiec was elected for the fourth time in five years.

Other Montrealers on the defence were tackle Glen Weir—for the fourth straight year—middle linebacker Carl Crennel (he last made it in 1973), defensive half Jim Burrow and safety Randy Rhino.

Ottawa placed three players on the defence—end Mike Fanucci, tackle Mike Raines and halfback Larry Brune. End Jim Corrigall made the Eastern all-stars for the sixth time in his seven years with Toronto. He was joined by corner back Eric Harris and punter Clark as the only Argos to make either starting team.

Hamilton linebacker Ben Zambiasi, the lone rookie in either starting lineup, completed the defensive alignment.

The only unanimous choices were Avery and Sweet.

There's Lots of Support For Jindy and His Boys

bill walker

Victoria High School soccer coach Jindy Johl, often referred to as a "good guy" in the sport, and his Tyees team came out as the "bad guys" in last week's British Columbia high school boys' soccer championship tournament at Nanaimo, according to media reports.

And Johl, for one, is not happy with the character assassination.

"A complete fabrication of the facts," he charged in rebuttal to last week's stories which charged or implied:

(a) Johl being red-carded for complaining about the refereeing during Vic High's 3-2 loss to Nanaimo;

(b) Johl failing to appear at a coaches' meeting that night where, if he wished, he could protest the officiating (the implication being he should have been there);

(c) Johl being cited by the provincial soccer commissioner Brian Leeson for "poor sportsmanship";

(d) the Vic High team forfeiting a game (for no apparent reason);

(e) several Vic High players on the sidelines during one game being carded by officials.

The "red-card" charge came about when goalkeeper Robbie Kaye of the Tyees was injured when submarined on a tackle by a Nanaimo player. Johl, who went to Kaye's aid, simply asked the referee "why was no foul called on the play"? The referee warned Johl that if he mentioned it again he would get a red card. Johl gave the "zipper" sign to his lips and received a yellow card (which is a caution).

As to not appearing at the coaches meeting, Johl explained it was not necessary to do so; some other coaches, including Mt. Doug's Brian Cornall, did not attend and, as he (Johl) wasn't protesting the refereeing, he had no reason to attend;

The "poor sportsmanship" charge by Leeson has Johl in a furore and he feels it came about because of what happened in the Nanaimo game, and now appears to have been a personality clash between Johl and the commissioner, prompted by Leeson's intrusion into what Johl called "places he didn't belong".

The first incident occurred over Kaye being called for taking too many steps. Leeson came over to the Victoria bench area at half time and started discussing the four-step rule with Johl and the players. "He had no business there," said Johl. "We knew the rule and I finally asked him 'will you please leave my players alone?'"

Later there was a penalty call against Victoria for hands which resulted in a Nanaimo goal. Johl didn't think it should have been a penalty shot, because the ball had been directed from the player's foot to his hand and, in Johl's opinion, hadn't changed direction. Again the commissioner decided to give his interpretation of the play, once more upsetting Johl and the team.

Leeson wouldn't leave the area when asked and said to Johl "who are you to yell at me?"

Finally, when there was a stoppage in play, Johl got the attention of the referee, asked for Leeson's removal from the area, and the referee complied.

It was not unusal for the commissioner to appear on the field, said Johl. He had done it at other games, but he had no business being that close to the bench area or talking to the players.

Johl also said that Leeson threatened him by saying "I'll get you at the meeting tonight" and also was guilty of a racial slur. Johl would not elaborate.

Leeson, incidentally, was voted out of office at the coaches' meeting Johl didn't attend and tournament co-ordinator Ron Martens of Nanaimo was elected to replace him, Johl said.

The game forfeiture on Friday, following Thursday's loss to Nanaimo, was a complete mixup. Johl said he went to the soccer centre to check where the team was playing. He and the team arrived at the designated park about five minutes before game time and saw the Mt. Doug game in progress on one field and nobody on the other. "We didn't see one Richmond player or any officials," he said, "so we asked if there was another park nearby". Told there was, the Tyees went there, but it wasn't the right place.

One of the team's hostesses contacted the soccer centre again and found out the Tyees had been at the right place the first time. "When we arrived back we saw the Richmond team leaving—the referee already had gone—and we were told we had forfeited the game. The Richmond players apparently had been there the first time, but they had intermingled with the crowd at the Mt. Doug game, which is probably why we didn't notice them." Johl admitted that by now the Vic high team was about 25 minutes late. "We could have played," he said, "but the bottom line was that we weren't there at kickoff time."

So the Tyees got bad press, unfairly it seems, for many things. And obviously they should have checked their schedule more carefully, too.

But there was another incident that didn't receive the publicity perhaps it should have and it also contributed to the Tyees' week.

It concerned a player, Mark Wyatt, who had been sent off the field in the McNair game for questioning the referee over the amount of time the goalkeeper was taking in putting the ball into play.

Usually when a player is sent off, an automatic one-game suspension follows.

"But this was a completely unjust call," Johl charged, "and we appealed."

"We were told we would be advised before our next game, or the referee of that game would be advised, if the appeal had been granted and Wyatt could play. But we never heard until after that game.

"The appeal had been granted. Wyatt had been cleared to play, but nobody in an official capacity had informed the referee or the Tyees. "We phoned but were unable to get an answer," said Johl.

As for the report that several Vic High players on the bench during the McNair game had been carded, "not one I know of," said Johl.

Johl was quick to praise his team. "The players were exemplary," he said, "while on the field, at the motel, and all the time we were at the tournament, and I'm proud of them. I'm just disturbed that the tournament was reported in this fashion. You know, we didn't know there were all those bad stories about us until we got home."

Oh yes. It was also reported that a letter of complaint against Johl and/or Vic High was to be sent to the superintendent of schools.

For what? Johl and the Tyees would like to know.

But if so, they will have one in return. And it may pack more a wallop than the first as Johl and Vic High have the support of other tournament officials and coaches.

"Nobody is going to destroy my life in sports like that," said Johl.

Earl Does It All

HOUSTON (AP) — It was supposed to be Earl Campbell vs. Delvin Williams, a battle of two super running backs on Monday night.

It was no contest.

"I don't try to compete against anybody or compare myself to anybody," said Campbell. Houston's soft-spoken rookie. And there was no way anybody could compare anybody with him after he ran wild over Miami.

His four touchdown runs, his 199 yards, 81 of them with barely a minute to play for what turned out to be the winning score in the Oilers' 35-30 victory—all were merely surface numbers, not indicative of just how great he may become.

His explosive performance gave him the NFL rushing lead with 1,143 yards, 13 more than Williams.

His four touchdowns gave him 12 for the season, one shy of the rookie record set by Cookie Gilchrist in 1962.

With Houston holding Williams to 73 yards rushing the Dolphins had to rely on Bob Griese's passing.

And Griese was superb, completing 23 of 33 attempts for 349 yards and two touchdowns, a 10-yarder to Nat Moore to open the scoring and an 11-yarder to Jimmy Cefalo on the final play.

One-yard runs by Williams in the second period and Leroy Harris in the third scored the other Miami touchdowns.

Houston quarterback Dan Pastorini passed 15 yards to Mike Barber for Houston's other touchdown.

Miami's other points came when Pastorini was sacked by A.J. Duhe in the end zone giving Miami a 23-21 lead. It was then that Houston held and fired back to win.

Geordie News is Bad

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

The news on Victoria Cougar captain Geordie Robertson is not good.

The leading scorer with the Western Hockey League team last season and with 11 goals to his credit despite missing several games this year, the 19-year-old centre has been sidelined again.

The length of Robertson's absence, at the moment, is still indefinite.

An injury to his left knee, suffered during Saturday's 2-1 victory over Seattle Breakers, has been diagnosed as a "slightly-torn cartilege."

At best, it may be at least a month before Robertson can return to the lineup.

"It's slightly torn," Robertson said, "but the doctor wants a specialist to look at it. They're also talking in terms of minor (exploratory) surgery to see exactly how much damage has been done."

Robertson, in his draft year, suffered a ligament injury to his right knee earlier this year.

The Cougars are heading into a comparatively light schedule for the next few weeks. That, plus a hope that today's examination by the specialist may turn up better news, prompted Cougar coach Jack Shupe to wish that "Geordie may not miss too many games."

The Cougars play only four games in the next 19 days, including Wednesday's Memorial Arena appearance of the Regina Pats.

Cougars also are without defenceman Mark Robinson. The 18-year-old underwent knee surgery last month. The cast was removed from Robinson's leg at the weekend but the rearguard isn't expected to play for at least another month.

Robertson's injury, ironically, happened two days after Shupe trimmed his roster by selling wingers Mickey Willgress and Sid Giroux to Calgary Wranglers.

Willgress, incidentally, is no longer with Calgary.

Calgary traded Willgress and winger Bill McLean to Lethbridge Broncos for centre Brandin Schultz at the weekend. The deal, however, is up in the air because of Schultz' reluctance to report to Calgary.

"He's gone home to Edmonton to think about," admitted Lethbridge coach Pat Ginnell. "If he doesn't report by Friday, then McLean and Willgress will revert to Calgary."

In another development, there's a good chance that Cougar centre Gary Lupul will go to Sweden next month with New Westminster Bruins, Canada's entry in the world junior championship.

New Westminster coach Ernie McLean said Monday he was just waiting for permission from league president Ed Chynoweth of Calgary.

Bruins leave for the world tournament Dec. 19 and return Jan. 4.

Chinese Invite Taiwanese Athletes To Join Asian Games Delegation

HONG KONG (Reuter) — China has selected renowned woman athletic coach Chi Cheng and eight other Taiwanese to be members of its delegation to next month's Asian Games in Bangkok, the New China news agency reported Monday.

There was no immediate reaction by Taiwan to the decision made by the All-China Sports Federation.

The agency quoted the federation's secretary-general, Sung Chung, as saying that following its invitation to Taiwan last April to send athletes to Peking for the national selections, Taiwanese sportsmen were "unable to come and take part in the selections."

Sung said the eight Taiwanese "can go directly to Bangkok and report to our delegation. . . ."

"We guarantee their complete freedom of returning to their domicile after the Asian Games," Sung added.

Soviet Union New Power On Rugby Scene

ROME (Reuter) — The Soviet Union emerged Sunday as a new international rugby power with a surprise 11-9 victory over Italy in a fast, hard-fought European Cup rugby match.

The Soviets, newcomers to the international rugby cicuit, repeatedly thwarted the more-experienced Italians with a combination of superb passing and brilliant tackling.

They led 7-0 at the half and were up by 11-0 two minutes into the second half before the Italians could get moving. The Italians scored their points during the final two minutes of the game.

'Slow Starter' Apps Finally Gets Goal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — He had gone 16 games without a goal, and Los Angeles Kings' Syl Apps admitted he was getting concerned.

"I've always been a slow starter, but never this slow," Apps said Monday night after his first goal of the season provided the Kings with a 4-3 National Hockey League victory over Chicago Black Hawks.

"You can't just sit back and play defence all the time," added Apps. "I feel really good about getting this goal."

"I'm very happy for Syl finally scoring his first goal," said Kings coach Bob Berry. "He has been playing very well lately."

Apps goal came at a good time for Los Angeles, winners of five of their last six games.

He took a pass from Mark Heaslip and skated in on a breakaway to beat Hawks' goalie Tony Esposito from 15 feet with just 2:27 left in the game.

Los Angeles had taken a 2-0 first-period lead on power-play goals by Randy Manery and Marcel Dionne.

That gave the Kings five power-play goals in their two meetings with Chicago this season, both Los Angeles victories.

"The power play killed us right off the bat," said Chicago coach Bob Pulford, whose team is 1-0-3 on a current six-game road trip.

"We going through one of those stretches where everyone's struggling. But we'll snap out of it."

Before Apps' game-winner, the Black Hawks had come from behind with 8:12 remaining to tie the score at 3-3 on Darcy Rota's goal.

The Kings took a 3-2 lead at 6:10 of the final period on defenceman Bob Murdoch's second goal after Chicago had tied the score 2-2 just 25 seconds into the final period on Phil Russell's goal.

Jim Harrison scored Chicago's first goal in the second period.

Braves Extract Some Revenge

Ed Beauchemin fired four goals to help Saanich Braves gain a little revenge while topping Juan de Fuca Gulls 10-3 in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game Monday night at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Gulls are the only team to beat Braves so far this season.

Jamie Bowes added two goals for Saanich, which led by period scores of 1-0 and 7-0, while singles were added by Dave Prince, Phil Varcoe, Scott Connors and Murray McLaren.

Mike Adamek (2) and Ross Anderson replied for Gulls.

Peter Adamek of Juan de Fuca was the busiest goalkeeper with 58 saves while Steve Hanna turned aside 22 shots on the Saanich net.

McEnroe Wins

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — John McEnroe of the United States battled for almost four hours Sunday to oversome countryman Tim Gullikson 6-7, 6-4, 7-6, 6-2 in the singles final of a Grand Prix tennis tournament.

It was McEnroe's second consecutive Grand Prix win.

Kirk Sweeps Over Favorite

VALETTA, Malta (Reuter) — Kirk Stevens of Canada scored the biggest surprise so far in the world amateur snooker championship Monday when he knocked out the favorite, Paul Mifsud of Malta, 5-0.

BLACK PLAYER SELECTED

LONDON (AP) — Viv Anderson, Nottingham Forest soccer star, today became the first black footballer to be named for a full England squad.

He was one of 18 players named by England manager Ron Greenwood for the game against Czechoslovakia at Wembley Stadium Nov. 29.

Anderson, a fullback with a flair for attacking down the wing and scoring goals, has played for the England B team, and in one under-21 international match. A star of the Nottingham Forest team that won the English League title last season, he is the only newcomer on the squad.

IONA PLANS CURBS FOR HASTY HOSTS

OTTAWA (CP) — Sport Minister Iona Campagnolo wants two years' notice from organizations bidding for international sporting events and counting on federal government assistance.

"We've operated on an ad hoc basis in the past and it's about time we laid down a definite hosting policy," Campagnolo said in a recent interview.

She is expected to outline the new policy later this week in the Commons.

Sport Canada, the federal agency responsible for amateur sport, will have two years to review bids and determine how much money the federal goverment will contribute, said senior consultant Al Rae.

The federal government, the province and host city will continue to share costs of events, he said.

Canada is preparing a bid for the 1990 world soccer tournament and Vancouver and Hamilton have expressed interest in bidding for the 1987 Pan-American Games.

But every major international sporting event in Canada since 1967 has had a deficit, including the 1967 Pan-American Games in Winnipeg, $1 million; 1973 Summer Games in New Westminster, B.C., $675,000; Canada Summer Games in St. John's, $750,000; and Edmonton's Commonwealth Games, $4 million.

A provincial inquiry into why costs for the 1976 Montreal Olympics, originally estimated at $210 million, skyrocketed to more than $1.2 billion, is underway in Montreal.

The federal government has been paying part of that deficit with Loto Canada revenues, scheduled to be discontinued in December, 1979.

Peter Lesaux, deputy minister for sport, said the government wants to be able "to predict and underwrite these deficits."

There are external factors which influence costs such as the value of the dollar, inflation and increased travelling expenses, he said.

Lesaux said the new policy will make it impossible for organizations to make hasty bids for events without consulting the federal government.

"We've often had to rescue events by providing facilities, money and manpower," Lesaux said. "It doesn't reflect well on sport or Canada."

Goalie, Penalty-Killers Keep Sabres on Move

MONTREAL (CP) — Steady goaltending by Don Edwards and the National Hockey League's best penalty-killing record have helped Buffalo Sabres forge an eight-game unbeaten streak and move into serious contention in the Adams Division.

Edwards, third in rookie-of-the-year voting last season, has played all but one of Buffalo's 18 games and has the best goals-against average in the league except for that of Doug Soetaert of New York Rangers, who has played only 72 minutes. Edwards's mark is 2.29.

League statistics show Edwards and Bob Sauve, who allowed seven goals in the game Edwards sat out, have given Buffalo a team average of 2.56, second in the league to the Rangers' 2.39.

Edwards has surrendered 16 goals during Buffalo's eight-game undefeated streak, helping move the third-place Sabres, 7-5-6 for 20 points, to within four points of first-place Boston Bruins and one point behind Toronto Maple Leafs in the Adams standings.

Buffalo's penalty killing efficiency mark of 90.5 per cent is tops in the NHL, and the team is second in shorthanded goals with five, all during the last eight games.

The Sabres have scored 11 of their 16 power-play goals during the unbeaten stretch in only 33 man-advantage situations.

Defenceman Jerry Korab, leading the team in scoring points with six goals and 11 assists for 17 points, has five power-play goals, three of them coming in the second period of a 9-2 victory Sunday night over Minnesota North Stars.

Meanwhile, Guy Chouinard and Bobby MacMillan of Atlanta Flames are tied atop the scoring race with 31 points. Chouinard has 13 goals and 18 assists, while MacMillan has 12 goals and 19 assists.

Marcel Dionne of Los Angeles Kings, who played host to Chicago Black Hawks in the only NHL game Monday night, has 30 points, two more than Guy Lafleur of Montreal Canadiens.

Chouinard had the most productive week among the scoring leaders, adding five goals and four assists to his totals in four games.

Five players are tied for the goal-scoring lead. Chouinard, Peter McNab of Boston, Butch Goring of Los Angeles, Gary Croteau of Colorado Rockies and Brian Sutter of St. Louis Blues all have 13 goals.

Italian Scores Macao Victory

MACAO (Reuter) — Ricardo Patrese of Italy won the Macao Grand Pix auto race for the second consecutive year on Sunday.

Second was Patrese's team-mate Derek Daly of Ireland. Both drove Chevrons. American Kevin Cogan was third, followed by Masahio Hasemi of Japan, Skeeter McKittrick of the U.S. and Albert Poon of Hong Kong.

Gowsell Wins

RED DEER (CP) — Defending champion Paul Gowsell of Calgary won the Red Deer bonanza cash curling bonspiel Monday night with a 9-8 extra-end triumph over Roy Talbot of Red Deer.

Victory gave the Gowsell rink $6,000. Talbot won $3,000 for second place.

Canada, Other Nations Reject World Cup Event

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Swimming Association has turned down an invitation to participate in next summer's inaugural swimming World Cup in Tokyo, an association official said Monday.

"We just didn't want to go," said Nick Thierry, chairman of the Canadian Swimming Coaches Association and a member of the swimming association executive board that decided last month to turn down the invitation.

Thierry said the board decided that prior commitments and budget requirements made the extra event too much to handle. He said the United States and East Germany also have indicated they will not be attending the meet.

A West German swimming official also said Monday that his country is reluctant to attend.

"We feel there is no need to go to Tokyo," Thierry said.

He pointed out that Canadian swimmers will be involved next summer in the Pan Am Games, World Student Games and dual swim meets in East Germany and the Soviet Union. The Canadian B team also will be involved in a dual meet with the U.S.

"Imagine the expense involved in also going to Tokyo and it's not even a full fledged international competition," Thierry said.

FINA, the international amateur swimming federation, announced following last summer's world championships plans to hold World Cups. Each event would see one competitor from each of eight countries. Canada, U.S., Soviet Union, East Germany and West Germany had obtained invitations because they finished as the top at the world championships in the men's and women's events.

Thierry said the countries have been reluctant to accept the idea because of its lateness. He said Canada already has worked out its international schedule for the next two to three years and applied a budget. To attend the Tokyo meet will require an additional $25,000 to $30,000, he said.

He noted that the international track and field federation also introduced World Cup competitions and that the next one in Montreal may be the last.

He said countries are beginning to lose interest because too many of the world's best cannot compete.

Will there be a Tokyo swimming World Cup if the top countries refuse to attend?

"Who would be interested in a meet where the top athletes are not competing?" Thierry said.

Angrove Tops Bakers Awards

Doug Angrove, one of the two players graduating from Victoria McDonalds, has been named most valuable player of the Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League club.

The team — which becomes Esquimalt Legion next season under a change in sponsorship — announced the awards at their recent banquet.

Angrove, who served as club captain during the last campaign, scored 37 goals and 26 assists.

Murray McLaren was named rookie of the year and Wayne Reeve, another rookie, collected an award as the top scorer with 35 goals and 51 assists.

Ron Sage, the other graduating player, was named the most inspirational player and Rhys Wickes collected laurels as the best defenceman.

Goaltending honors went to Bill Thomas, the most improved award went to Tarey Pollock and best conditioned honors were handed to Paul Michael.

Cricket Triumph

INDORE, India (AP) — The West Indies cricket team powered its way to a crushing 263-run win over the Indian Central Zone team on Sunday in the opening match of a three-and-a-half month tour.

FUTURE OF TOMMY DOCHERTY AN ISSUE FOR DERBY COUNTY

LONDON (Reuter) — The English Football Association said Monday the future of suspended Derby County manager Tommy Docherty with the club was at present a domestic issue to be decided by Derby.

Derby County suspended Docherty for seven days last week while considering the implications of his admission from the witness box that he had lied in a high court libel action he had taken against Scottish international Willie Morgan.

Docherty withdrew his action against Morgan, who was one of his players when both were connected with the Manchester United club.

The FA said in a statement Monday: "Following a request from Derby County, representatives of the club met representatives of the FA to consider the recent high court action concerning the Derby County manager, Mr. Docherty.

"It was agreed that the question of the future of Mr. Docherty at Derby County was at this time a domestic issue and any decision would have to be made by the Derby County Football Club."

Football Association officials also announced Monday that Don Revie, former manager of the England soccer team, will appear before a commission on Dec. 18 to answer a charge of bringing the game into disrepute.

Revie was banned from British football in August, 1977, pending his appearance to answer the charge. The ban was imposed a month after he walked out on the England job to take up a $680,000 football contract with the United Arab Emirates.

Also before the Dec. 18 commission will be Alan Ball, Southampton and England midfield player who, in a recently-published book, made some comments about Revie.

Threat of Monopoly In European Soccer

By Reuter

A possible Anglo-West German domination of the European Football Union (UEFA) Cup looms over the third-round matches due to be played Wednesday with quarter-final places the rewards when reverse legs are completed in two weeks time.

All four West German entries have survived the first two rounds along with three English clubs. As they have avoided each other in the draw, the quarter-finals could, in theory, be monopolized by these two countries with only Honved of Hungary or Ajax of Holland intervening.

But crack clubs from Denmark, France, Italy, Poland, Spain, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia will be trying to ensure wider participation in the quarter-finals.

Italians hope that Milan can take a winning first leg lead over England's Manchester City, missing its suspended midfield star Gary Owen. Milan moved to the top of the Italian league on the weekend after winning 3-2 at Vicenza.

Former England striker Mick Channon, who limped out of City's match at Liverpool on Saturday with a pulled muscle, is a doubtful start in Milan.

Another English club facing a tough away leg is Arsenal, which travels to Yugoslavia without its Irish midfield star Liam Brady.

Brady, ordered off with two opponents in the previous round, had his suspension cut on appeal but must still miss both legs.

Arsenal, which held unbeaten Everton to a 2-2 draw in London Saturday, faces Red Star Belgrade.

Red Star, despite having several internationals on the team, has lost five of 14 domestic league matches this season.

On form, the other English survivor, West Bromwich, must be more confident about its visit to Spain to tackle Valencia.

West Bromwich is tucked into third place in the English League First Division—one point behind Everton—while Valencia, despite the aid of Argentine World Cup hero Mario Kempes, remains in mid-table.

Stuttgart, usually the strongest of the West German contestants, is at home to Dukla Prague, Czechoslovakian league leaders.

An equally stern examination awaits Duisburg at Strasbourg, the French league leader. Duisburg is one place off the bottom in the West German league.

In Budapest, Honved, knocked off the top of the Hungarian league by a 1-0 defeat at the hands of Videoton, await a visit from Ajax, anxious to keep in Holland the Cup, which PSV Eindhoven won last year.

Hawthorne Fire Leaves Problem

CHICAGO (AP) — The Illinois Racing Board will decide on Wednesday if Sportsmen's Park will act as host for the remainder of the horse-racing meeting scheduled for fire-gutted Hawthorne Race Course.

The fire Sunday morning destroyed the wooden grandstands and most of the concrete and steel clubhouse, fire officials said.

Damage was estimated at $10 million. A track official said the track was insured for $3.7 million.

Arson was not ruled out as the cause of the blaze

No persons or horses were injured in the five-hour blaze, fire authorities said.

The thoroughbred meeting at Hawthorne was to have closed on Dec. 21. A 48-day harness racing season was to have started on Jan. 1.

The state can lose an estimated $2.8 million in tax revenue if the racing card scan't be completed, a racing board official said.

Even Ryan Was Impressed

By KAREN DeYOUNG
Washington Post

GEORGETOWN, Guyana — While news of nearly 400 deaths, including a U.S. congressmen, in a faraway religious community was the first many people outside of California had heard of the People's Temple, Rev. Jim Jones and his flock were not strangers to the people of this isolated, sparsely populated country.

Neither were they friends.

Guyanese questioned here Monday said they knew of the People's Temple community, and of the foreigners who lived there, but had little idea who they were or why they were in Guyana.

Still reeling from the shock of the massacre, they repeatedly referred to it as "trouble between Americans" that had happened to take place on their soil but had little to do with their country.

"We had no problems with them before this," government information minister Shirley Field-Ridley said Monday. "They obeyed all the laws."

Leading opponents of Prime Minister Forbes Burnham's government said the People's Temple rather seemed exempt from many of Guyana's laws, particularly those governing the payment of import and export duties and, as became clear last weekend, the regulation of firearms.

Clearly, Jones and the temple were in favor with the Burnham government. When important visitors came to the community, such as former California Lt. Gov. Mervyn Dymall on two occasions since early 1977, they and Jones often were hosted by deputy prime minister Ptolemy Reid and received by Burnham.

Temple adherents, who maintain a large residence in Georgetown and operated a second-hand clothing and junk store here, often attended government functions en masse, local residents said.

Aside from any direct political connections, however, the People's Temple Agricultural and Medical Project was the largest and best example of a government land-use project designed to allow groups of outsiders to develop the largely unpopulated jungle that covers most of Guyana.

At Jonestown, the community the temple people named after their leader at its founding in late 1973, they cleared and ploughed some of the densest jungle in South America. Located 159 miles to the northwest of Georgetown, the area is reachable only by riverboat or aircraft.

Additionally, Jones espoused ideology (which his wife in a U.S. interview several years ago called "Marxist social philosophy") that was in line with that of both Burnham and leading political opponent Cheddi Jagan.

Temple literature describes Jonestown founders as a small group of pioneers who used sweat and determination to carve out of the jungle an agricultural project they expected in 1977 to "become self sufficient in three to five years."

In the meantime, with funds supplied from the United States, they built houses, workshops, a sawmill, communal halls and schools at Jonestown.

While recent visitors estimated the number of Jonestown residents at 800 to 900, at least one temple publication put the number at 1,500 last year.

Newsletters sent to U.S. temple members, in much the same manner as Catholic and other Protestant Third World missions inform their members, talk about medical and senior citizen projects, special schools and community projects.

None of those descriptions is disputed by local residents. Reporters who survived the fatal congressional mission said that, before the massacre, they had been on balance favorably impressed with the community facilities.

Rep. Leo Ryan, the congressman who died there last Saturday, reportedly told others in the group that, except for its isolation that physically prevented those who wanted to from leaving, and whatever other impediments there were to their exit, he was favorably impressed with the project.

Jones moved full-time to the Guyana community in spring last year and it was in the summer of 1977, not long after Jones' arrival here, that unfavorable publicity alleging extortion from California temple members and corporal punishment began to spread in the United States and quickly made its way to Guyana.

Local rumors — none of them confirmed, but all widely circulated here — talked of downriver trips by a converted fishing trawler owned by the community and ostensibly used to transport produce to Georgetown markets.

There was widespread speculation here — again not proven or even deeply investigated — that arms were being brought ashore. The issue of weapons is a touchy one in Guyana, where gun permits sometimes are allegedly given out on the basis of politics.

Dear Jim: White House

NEW YORK (AP) — A sheaf of endorsements attributed to dozens of prominent U.S. citizens, including first lady Rosalynn Carter apparently bought time for Rev. Jim Jones in Guyana.

The Guyanese government released the papers Monday.

Recent events made it appear "we allowed a bunch of crazies into Guyana," Minister of State Christopher Nascimento said, "but in fact Jones presented references of the highest calibre."

Many of those quoted in the documents said they couldn't remember talking to Jones, writing letters for him or making speeches about him or his church.

But at least one said she recalled writing a letter of endorsement, and saw no reason not to.

"Every time we turned around, he (Jones) was doing great things," said Donneter Lane, executive director of the San Francisco Council of Churches.

Jones wrote to Mrs. Carter on March 17, 1977, saying he had missed meeting evangelist Ruth Carter Stapleton, President Carter's sister, during her trip to San Francisco.

Mrs. Carter, in a hand-written note on White House stationery, wrote to Jones on April 12, 1977, saying: "Dear Jim, Thank you for your letter. I enjoyed being with you during the campaign — and do hope you can meet Ruth soon. Sincerely, (signed) Rosalynn Carter."

Suicide Shocking But Not Surprising

By JANE SEE WHITE
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Hundreds of members of a religious cult formed an orderly line, then took their lives with poison. Shocking, yes. And bizarre. But not surprising, say the experts.

Challenged from without, shaken by defections within, Rev. Jim Jones's People's Temple swelled with uncertainty, then "imploded," experts believe. About 400 cultists took their own lives in the isolated jungle of Guyana, a tiny South American republic.

Mind-befogging though the mass suicide appears, scholars on suicide and cults such as the People's Temple say they saw it coming. It was only a question, they say, of whom and when.

"Nobody has believed we silly people who said it is possible to control people to this degree," said Boston psychiatrist John Clark, who has studied these cults for five years. "But it has happened."

"This is not surprising," said Rabbi James Rudin, an official of the American Jewish Committee who has written extensively on cults. "It's not surprising when you consider the totalitarian atmosphere in which most cults operate."

These men say that strong, even totalitarian, leaders like Jones leave no room for their adherents to dissent. Often, says Clark, it is this uniformity of thought and belief that attracts followers:

"People who go into cults are in a state of mind that does not allow inside information to enter. They feel safe, cozy. They can talk their own language to each other. It's reinforced by their opposition to all outside reality — an 'us-and-they' mentality."

Clark believes Congressman Ryan cracked this wall of uniformity when he visited the People's Temple commune Saturday to investigate alleged abuse of sect members; several members chose to leave with him. These events, Clark says, "tore apart the cult's sense of certainty."

"I think the thing imploded," he said. "You have to understand that there is no room for ambiguity in groups like this. When ambiguity occurred, when something went wrong, they all panicked and the cult destroyed itself."

The ambush and killings followed.

Phoney Coupon Clippers Clipped

WASHINGTON (CP) — U.S. postal authorities created a fictitious product in order to crack down on fradulent coupon redemption schemes estimated to net fast-buck entrepreneurs up to $200 million a year.

Various reports suggest postal authorities were responsible for a product called "Breen, the detergent that cleans away dirt and grime" that was promoted with four million coupons in major newspapers offering 25-cent discounts.

The product never existed, but postal authorities were quickly flooded with claims for the 25-cent redemptions from people who claimed they had bought Breen.

Using undercover agents and disguised postal inspectors, authorities were able to uncover dozens of conspiracies for improperly cashing in the coupons.

In total, manufacturers of all sorts of products send out about 80 billion discount coupons a year. Even though their average value is only about 20 cents, thieves find it profitable if they can cash in large numbers of the coupons.

There are several schemes they use:

● Fictitious stores are created so fraudulent redeemers can obtain stacks of the coupons and send them to the manufacturer, usually for the coupon's face value plus a nickel handling charge.

● Real stores sometimes submit coupons for products never sold, by "slating" them in with legitimate coupons, sometimes working with a middleman who gets hundreds of the coupons from newspapers and other sources.

● Crooked clearing houses, used by manufacturers and retailers who want to avoid the trouble of sorting the coupons themselves, can easily mix in fraudulent coupones with the legitimate ones.

● Sometimes unwittingly, charitable groups clip the coupons for a middleman working for a crooked grocer by offering the group a donation for each coupon clipped. The postal authories found some of these charitable groups were aware their activities were illegal but did it anyway.

Within six months, postal authorities received redemption claims from about 2,100 stores for Breen. Each of the coupons carried a standard warning that purchase of the product was required before a discount could be claimed.

The Post Office is reported to have zeroed in on about 300 companies engaged in large-scale redemptions with mass arrests expected soon in the New York metropolitan area.

Investigations are continuing in about a half-dozen locations.

Zambian Whites Anxious After Killing

Times News Services

LUSAKA — Discovery of the body of an elderly Canadian-born woman on her farm near Lusaka is likely to heighten the anxiety of whites in isolated farming areas round the Zambian capital.

Police recovered Muriel Bissell's body last Saturday from her farm about 16 kilometres west of here.

She disappeared on Nov. 8 during a wave of anti-white unrest following Rhodesian air strikes into Zambia.

Police said they detained her farm manager, believed to be a black Rhodesian, and three other suspects.

There was no suggestion in the police statement that the guerrillas of Joshua Nkomo's Zambian-based Zimbabwe African Peoples Union (ZAPU) were responsible.

The detained black Rhodesian farm manager had earlier told Miss Bissell's friends that armed men took her away.

Police said in a statement that some of her property had been found with the farm manager's parents and indicated that her body had been found on her own property, possibly in a house on the farm.

Meanwhile, Rhodesian planes have showered refugee camps in neighboring Botswana with leaflets urging black Rhodesians who have fled to return home, the government said Monday in Salisbury.

A statement said the leaflets, dropped Sunday, explained an agreement made last March setting up a biracial transitional government and promising black rule. They also included copies of newspaper headlines reporting Rhodesian raids on Patriotic Front black nationalist guerrilla bases in Zambia.

An estimated 15,000 black Rhodesians who fled across the border to escape the Rhodesian war or to join guerrilla forces are reported to be in three camps in Botswana.

Rhodesian security forces claim the camps serve as staging posts for would-be guerrillas who travel on to training bases of Nkomo's guerrillas in Zambia.

BIG CAMEL TREK BEGINS

TOKYO (AFP) — Two Japanese students have set out for what is believed to be the world's first latitudinal crossing of the Sahara desert on camels, it was reported in Tokyo today.

A letter reaching Jiji Press in Tokyo said the students left Nouakchott, Mauritania, on Nov. 7, about a month earlier than their original schedule because they had broken in the camels very smoothly.

The two are identified as Nozomu Iida, 21, and Joriyuki Kojima, 20, of Doshisha University in Kyoto. They are members of the university's exploration club.

The 5,700-kilometre (3,562-mile) journey from Nouakchott to Fada, Chad, is expected to take about 120 days.

In recent years, a British journalist and a Japanese youth had attempted at becoming the first to cross the vast desert, Jiji said.

The journalist gave up halfway through his journey in 1972-73 while the 22-year-old Takashi Kamionyu of Tokyo died of unknown cause after covering about 3,000 kilometres (1,875 miles) and losing his camel in 1975, the agency added.

Canada Restricted Ray Probe Team?

By CLAUDE ADAMS
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A U.S. Congressional committee taking a fresh look at the 1968 slaying of Martin Luther King Jr. has all but closed its books on James Earl Ray's movements in Canada, but a number of mysteries remain.

Ray, the convicted assassin of the civil rights leader, now serving a 99-year sentence for the Memphis shooting, spent time in Canada before and after the assassination.

Ed Evans, chief investigator with the committee, said in an interview Monday that the Canadian government, through the RCMP, put some tight restrictions on his investigative team when it visited Canada earlier this year.

The team was hoping to question several dozen people in the Toronto and Montreal areas who might have any knowledge about Ray, but the RCMP refused to give the investigators an entirely free rein, Evans said.

Thus, a "handful" of people who refused to talk to the investigators, for whatever reason, were shielded from subpoenas.

"As a former police officer, this surprised me a little," Evans said.

A key puzzle that remains unanswered is the "coincidence" of the three aliases that Ray used while in Canada.

Evans said that Eric Galt, Ramon George Sneyd and Paul Bridgman—the names appearing on documents that Ray used—were men from the Scarborough, Ont., area.

Ray has testified that he located the names of Sneyd and Bridgman by going through the birth notices in 1932 editions of the now-defunct Toronto Telegram newspaper.

He was searching for men his age that he could impersonate for passport purposes. Indeed, Ray did manage to secure a passport under the Sneyd name.

"For someone to have found 1932 birth records of men who still live in Toronto and within miles of one another, well, it's all a little weird," Evans said.

The investigator added that his team hoped to question a Tronto doctor who had treated both Sneyd and Bridgman, to try to determine if there were some clear link between the aliases, but the doctor declined to be interviewed.

One of the stipulations laid down by the RCMP, Evans said, was that they would have the final say about who should be required to talk to the Congressional committee. The RCMP also wanted to be present at all interrogations.

The U.S. investigators, incidentally, did not encounter such problems in Great Britain, scene of Ray's arrest in 1968. There, Scotland Yard was fully co-operative, Mr. Evans said.

Nearly all the Canadians that the investigators hoped to talk to had already been thoroughly quizzed by the RCMP years ago.

ELDORADOS, TORONADOS RECALLED

DETROIT (Reuter) — General Motors Corp. said Monday it is recalling 3,550 Cadillac Eldoradoes and 2,550 Oldsmobile Toronados because of a faulty mechanism which causes the cars to roll freely if unchecked by the parking brake.

GM said it has received reports of five accidents but that no injuries resulted. The company said all the cars wae 1977 models produced in March, 1977.

Hondas Also

TOKYO (Reuter) — Honda Motor Co. Ltd said today it is recalling 40,000 motorcycles following the discovery of defects in parts designed to prevent engine vibration.

The recall of 35,000 CX500 models as well as 5,000 G1400s and G1500s will cost the company about $2.5 million.

Honda said defective cam-chain guides will be replaced free of charge through its dealerships.

Not Guilty In Gem Deal, Says Rifkin

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Computer analyst Stanley Mark Rifkin pleaded not guilty Monday to stealing $10.2 million in bank funds and exchanging them for a cache of Soviet diamonds.

Rifkin said "not guilty" four times when asked to plead on each charge against him.

MICROWAVES: NO ILL EFFECTS

Washington Post

BALTIMORE — Personnel working at the U.S. embassy in Moscow between 1953 to 1976 suffered no apparent ill effects from the Soviet Union's microwave bombardment of the embassy during those 23 years.

That was the conclusion of the Johns Hopkins University School of Public Health, where more than 100 persons spent more than two years in an exhaustive study of the health of the more than 2,000 Americans who worked at the U.S. embassy in Moscow from 1953 to 1976 when the Soviet Secret Police beamed microwaves at the embassy building to tap telephones and interfere with U.S. telephone and cable traffic.

"With very few exceptions, there was no difference in the health of these people," Johns Hopkins' Dr. Abraham Lilienfeld, who directed the study at the request of the state department, told a press conference Monday. "There is no convincing evidence to implicate the exposure of these people to microwave radiation and the onset of any adverse health effects."

No cancers, no brain disorders and no loss of vision was found out of the ordinary in any of the embassy personnel scrutinized in the Johns Hopkins study.

All Safe on Hijacked Ferry

ISTANBUL (AP) — Ten armed youths, described as Maoists, hijacked an international ferry carrying 750 passengers Monday but then freed the skipper and mingled in the crowd as gunboats escorted the craft back to shore, authorities reported.

All the passengers except children were searched on leaving the ferry Uskudar and about 500 persons were detained for questioning as authorities tried to pick out the hijackers.

Investigators said the left-wing militants apparently decided to seize the boat after they were refused permission to attend funeral rites for one of two comrades slain Friday. The youths exchanged shots with police when they were turned away from the morgue and then ran to the Uskudar's loading pier about 1.6 kilometre away and boarded the vessel.

Police sources said 10 youths forced their way into the captain's cabin and ordered him at gunpoint to sail the ferry out of its dock at Karakoy, Istanbul's sector on the European side of the Bosporous Strait.

As the boat criss-crossed the strait that separates Asia and Europe, two gunboats went in pursuit and the hijackers ordered the captain to head for the Maramar Sea at the southern mouth of the Bosporous.

During the two-hour enforced cruise, they also demanded the coffins and bodies of their slain friends be delivered to the boat, that the killers be arrested, and a meeting be arranged with Istanbul Gov. Ihsan Tekin.

Authorities rejected all demands and the gunmen left the captain's office and joined the throng of apprehensive passengers.

Police said no one was hurt in the shooting near the morgue but 20 persons were arrested in the vicinity. A funeral was in progress for Aziz Colak, a university student.

New Warning on Ozone

GENEVA (Reuter) — The World Meteorological Organization (WMO) said today continued use of fluorocarbons, which are used mainly in spray cans, could destroy 15 per cent of the earth's ozone layer in 100 years and seriously affect health and weather.

The United Nations agency said high-flying balloons above Canada and the United States have provided proof that fluorocarbons are destroying chlorine molecules at an alarming rate, diminishing protection from the sun's harmful ultraviolet radiation.

Ozone depletion causes more heat in the stratosphere and this could increase ground temperatures as well as alter regional weather.

The U.S. has already outlawed the use of fluorocarbons as propellants in aerosol containers and for other non-essential purposes, while Canada and a number of European governments are considering similar moves.

Dr. Rumen Bojkov, chief WMO atmospheric scientist, told a news conference:

"One molecule of chlorofluoromethane takes seven to 10 days to reach the ozone layer which extends from six to 28 miles (9.6 to 44.8 kilometres) in the stratosphere.

"It lasts for about 60 years and destroys up to 1,000 atoms of chlorine. If the release of these molecules continues at the 1977 rate, the ozone layer will be reduced by 15 per cent in 100 years' time."

WMO experts from Canada, the U.S., Britain, the Soviet Union, Switzerland and Belgium decided at their meeting last month that supersonic aircraft have a negligible effect on the ozone layer at heights below 17½ kilometres.

But man's other activities have already reduced the ozone layer by two per cent, prompting WHO to warn that this exposes him to elements in the sun's ultraviolet rays which are considered a key cause to skin cancer.

Daon Project Up to Wright On Thursday

The final decision on a proposed Daon Development Corp. project in James Bay will fall solely on the shoulders of Ald. Bob Wright on Thursday.

That much was decided at a special council meeting Monday which Wright didn't attend.

A motion to approve the project was defeated on a tie vote, 4-4, but Mayor Mike Young refused to let the controversial matter die.

The Daon plan to build 23 single-family units at Boyd and Luxton has been before council four times — and Young ruled it should come back for consideration again Thursday.

After Young, Ald. Larry Ryan, John Hayes and Bill Tindall had failed to win approval for the project the mayor directed that it be brought back for reconsideration.

"It should be voted on by the full council," he said, nodding towards Wright's empty chair.

Ald. Murray Glazier, Robin Blencoe, Bill McElroy and Ron McKenzie voted against the development.

Glazier may not be in attendance Thursday when council meets in the James Bay Community Centre, but Young said that isn't important because the latest round of voting had indicated where all other members of council stand.

If Wright votes against the proposal, and Glazier is absent, Young would simply need to withold his vote to allow the majority of aldermen to decide the matter.

When the Daon proposal first came before council it was quickly rejected as not compatible with the James Bay community. It won a reprieve, however, when Ryan asked council to reconsider the matter because of a drastic shortage of work for the building trades.

The proposal was headed for another setback at the second meeting when Daon indicated it would be prepared to reduce the project's density.

At its third appearance before council the Daon plans showed a strip of land, totalling 300 square feet, had been added on around the one-and-a-half acre site.

No decision was made on the matter the third time at bat.

At Monday's meeting McElroy said "the adding of only 300 square feet was an insult to council."

He said he'd expected the developers to reduce the project's density by removing two or three units.

Hayes argued that Daon had agreed to build single-family units on adjacent lots facing Dallas and that was a positive factor to be considered. He also said it is important that a number of residents in the immediate neighborhood had supported the project.

"There are a lot of red herrings in this development and I believe there's been a slightly hysterical reaction to it," said Hayes.

Ryan said he still favors the project, but not because of the position taken by the building trades.

He said he believed the development would be good for the James Bay community as a whole.

Glazier and Blencoe criticised the development design, with Blencoe saying "it reminds me of something out of a science fiction novel; all the same, austere, cold . . ."

Before the Judge

The preliminary hearing into a charge of conspiracy to import marijuana against 17 persons began Monday in Victoria provincial court before Judge Reg Moir of Kelowna.

Fifteen men and two women, are charged in connection with the seizure of 13 tons of Colombian marijuana July 15 near Shelter Inlet, 32 kilometres northwest of Tofino.

The operation involved between 600 and 700 Canadian armed forces personnel, two Canadian warships, and the RCMP.

Only one of the two women who were charged Nov. 7, more than three months after the 15 men were charged, was in court Monday. A source said the other was in hospital but would appear today.

Security inside and outside the court was tight with five deputy sheriffs and two uniformed RCMP officers seated inside the courtroom and one deputy outside with a walkie-talkie. Three deputies from the Mainland and one from Nanaimo have been brought in to augment the Law Courts security staff.

The hearing has been scheduled for six weeks between now and January and is slotted for three separate two-week sittings.

Five defence lawyers are involved and one of seven defendants still in custody is unrepresented by legal counsel.

Judge Fred Green warned an 18-year-old woman that heavier fines or imprisonment were usual for convictions for assaulting policemen.

Judith Arlene Demas, 18, who gave police an address of the Songhees Reserve, pleaded guilty to assaulting a city police officer.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court police were called to the Crown And beer parlor shortly before 10 p.m., Nov. 9, and arrived at an altercation in the Imperial Inn parking lot.

Police tried to intervene, Mulligan continued, and asked Demas to step aside. She refused and continued yelling at the officers before stepping back and slapping one of them in the face, Mulligan said.

Beside the fine, Green also imposed a three-month probation and also prohibited her from entering any licenced premises during that period. The judge reminded her she is under age and not legally allowed to go into such establishments.

A 23-year-old man who shoplifted a package of eye makeup valued at $3.95 was fined $300.

Geoffrey Green, no fixed address, pleaded guilty to theft from Shoppers Drug Mart, 1302 Douglas, Nov. 6.

Green had previous convictions including Feb. 5, 1973, when he received five months definite and six months indeterminate for theft, possession of stolen property and breaking and entering; April 26, 1973, when he received one year definite and one year indeterminate for breaking and entering; and Jan. 24, 1977, when he was fined $150 for two counts of contributing to juvenile deliquency.

Fined for drinking-driving were: Dwight William Archibald, 27, of 2448 Kemp Lake Road, $600; Lane Scott Dougall, 28, of 1959 Kaltasin, $350; and Richard Dale Courser, 34, of 10390 Bowerbank, $300.

CITY SURPLUS OF $750,000

The city of Victoria will finish 1978 with a $750,000 budget surplus, finance committee chairman Ald. Murrary Glazier said Monday.

He said the surplus is due to five main factors:

— Revenues from provincial government taxes is $76,000 higher than expected.

— $200,000 less than expected has been used from the city's contingency fund.

— $160,000 in additional revenues has come from the Greater Victoria Water Board.

— Because of the dry summer revenues from water sales was $150,000 more than expected.

— Interest on a special bank loan was overestimated by $73,000.

Glazier said a number of other accounts contributed another $100,000 to the overall surplus.

He pointed out that $200,000 of the surplus has already been earmarked for renovations to the Johnston Street bridge next year.

It's Time Again for the Annual Christmas Fair

elizabeth forbes

It's that time again!

Time for me to remind you the Auxiliary for the Retarded will hold its ninth annual Christmas Fair this Saturday in the First United Church Hall, 932 Balmoral Street, from 10:30 in the morning until 4 in the afternoon.

Also, that you can support this extremely worthy effort not only by attending the fair but by donating items for the various stalls.

Indeed, I'm told by members of the auxiliary they more or less depend on your donations now to help make the fair a success.

At the moment their main request is for home baking, jams, pickles and the like.

You can add to that list, of course, toys, jewelry sewing, knitting, knick-knacks, attic treasures, books, plants and items for the Christmas gift stall.

"In fact, anything a person feels would sell, we will be more than happy to receive," one member told me.

Items can be left at the Wee-Bit-Worn Shoppe, 1301 Gladstone Avenue (phone 385-7331) or you can get in touch with Mrs. Cathy Kiteley, this year's general co-ordinator of the fair. Her phone number is 478-2001.

I'm sure I don't need to remind you the Auxiliary for the Retarded is dedicated to serving all the retarded of the Greater Victoria area and that through fund-raising efforts it is able to provide financial support for the various work, training and recreational programs for the retarded.

During the past year, because of your support, it has been able to give considerable financial aid to the Dogwood School Auxiliary, McKenzie Street Group Home, Langford School and Hayward Heights Group Home.

It assisted a number of retarded athletes to attend the special Olympics in Regina, helped the Sentinal Centre workshop project, also the Canadian Retarded and Mental Health publication "Inside-Out-Side" and added a further sum to an on-going building fund.

You can do no better than help this worthwhile cause with your donations of saleable items for the fair or by attending that event on Saturday and spending some of your Christmas shopping money.

The auxiliary is planning to serve a hot lunch from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. amd afternoon tea from 2 to 4 p.m.

There will be four "dandy" raffles I've been told — a needle-point framed picture, a fine flower painting by Peggy Day, a knitted bedspread and of course, the usual $60 grocery hamper. Mrs. Mary Oakley is convening this project and her telephone is 598-3603.

Christmas cards with designs by the retarded of Canada will be available again this year not only at the fair but at various other outlets. Mrs. Joan Kjargaard (479-1948) is the convener.

Children's clothes will be for sale as well as handcrafts and the program will be rounded out with a fish pond and some interesting games. It is also expected that Santa Claus will drop in for a visit.

AND, for your information, there is no admission charge to the fair.

In Town — Remember Mary Lou Crerar? She was teaching Japanese brush painting and what she called "The Joy of Color with Oils", at the Emily Carr Art Centre, about three years ago.

Right now she is visiting in town for a month from her present home in Edmonton and, while here, is presenting a showing of her Japanese brush work.

It's mounted at the Tiki Gallery, 545 Fisgard Street. The opening was last night and it will continue until December 9.

Mrs. Crerar's paintings have been exhibited across Canada and in the States.

She studied oils at the Vancouver School of Art and learned brush painting (Sumi-e) from Japanese experts in Toronto.

She's Coming! — Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova of the United Service Committee of Canada is on her way across the country with her annual plea for Friendship Dollars to help her give aid, in the coming year, to the starving, orphaned, frightened, maimed and ill around the world.

She reaches Victoria Thursday evening and for the next few days will be busy meeting people at local and government levels, appearing on television, visiting Duncan — also Pearson College — and being interviewed by the press.

Dr. Lotta will speak at a public meeting in the Georgian Lounge at the Empress Hotel on Wednesday, November 29 at 8 p.m.

Please put that date on your calendar and make a point of being there.

Also make sure that in your budget for Yuletide giving you apportion some funds to help this dedicated woman's hopes come true.

Remember your contributions are deductible for income tax purposes.

Remember too, as Dr. Lotta will tell you, hers is practical aid at grass roots level. And it works!

And please keep in mind the Empress Hotel lounge is made available for the public meeting through a Victoria resident who admires Dr. Hitschmanova's work and her complete dedication.

None of your Friendship Dollars are used for that purpose.

Partyphobia? Don't Fret; You Have Company

NEW YORK (AP) — If you get butterflies in your stomach when it's time to entertain, you're not unique.

"Partyphobia" is the term used by Edgar Watkins, a designer of table-top accessories by vocation and a party host by avocation.

"Though few admit it," he says, "I think everybody gets nervous before giving a party — even those who do it well."

Ways to combat this anxiety are covered at length in a book Watkins is preparing. From personal experience, he advises:

"Give it a whirl — like a phobia of any sort, the best thing is to take a deep breath and dive in."

Party-giving was not exactly new to Watkins when he arrived in New York City 15 years ago. At home in Texas, his parents entertained extensively.

Adapting to New York, Watkins hit upon two fundamentals.

"Specialize in things that no one else is specializing in," he said. "And, most importantly, take a look at the area you will be entertaining in."

He discovered that his New York friends were cooking beautiful, elaborate meals.

"I wasn't going to enter that sweepstakes," he said. Instead, he would make his debut by serving regional food.

"I called my grandmother and got her recipe for chili," he recalls. "I called my aunt to find out how she did fried chicken. The beauty was if it didn't work out exactly right, nobody would know, since they weren't familiar with that style of cooking."

Watkins realizes that his formula is not the norm.

"People who are superb cooks might scream and faint when I say that food is considerably less important to a party than the ambiance and the chemistry between the people.

"Simple but delicious dishes, I find, are the most satisfactory," he says.

Getting the right number of people in the right space is basic. Watkins lives in a brownstone with a small garden in front and a patio in the rear.

"In the winter, I shouldn't entertain more than six," he says. "But in the summer, using the patio, I can entertain 50."

A big part of partyphobia, Watkins believes, is panic over making a mistake.

"The more cautious — less adventurous — you are, the less distinctive will be anything you produce."

ANTACID WARNING ISSUED

OTTAWA (CP) - Pregnant women who frequently use antacids such as Tums or Alka Seltzer may be risking unknown side affects on their unborn babies, says the Canadian Pharmaceutical Journal.

"Antacids are one of the most widely used classes of non-prescription drugs in pregnancy; 35 to 60 per cent of all women take an antacid at some time in the course of their pregnancy," says a report in the journal's latest issue.

The study was prepared for the Toronto General Hospital by a graduating pharmacist.

Although little evidence is available about side affects on the developing fetus, pregnant women should not use any kind of drug, even an antacid, without consulting their physicians, Dr. Peter Barwin, an Ottawa gynecologist and obstetrician, said.

DEAR ABBY: Gary and I have been married for a year, during which time he's been a perfect husband. I'm 24 and he's 26.

Last week I learned that Gary had a vasectomy before we were married. He didn't tell me. I found out accidentally when I came across his medical records.

Before we were married he promised me a family. How should this be handled?

WANTS CHILDREN

DEAR WANTS: Unfortunately, your husband's credibility is consistent with his fertility. (Imagine promising you a rose garden when he knew he had no seeds!)

I need more information. Why did Gary have a vasectomy? (If he dislikes children, he'd probably make a poor father.)

Is his vasectomy irreversible? (Some are not.) If his is, and he now wants a family, there are children to adopt, you know.

This world needs responsible parents more than it needs more children.

DEAR ABBY: While flying from Los Angeles to Chicago recently, I was rudely awakened from a much-needed nap by a booming voice that came over the loudspeaker with: "THIS IS YOUR CAPTAIN SPEAKING! We are now flying over the Grand Canyon . . ., etc."

Abby, this was not a chartered flight carrying a load of sight-seeing hicks who had never flown before. I'm sure most of the passengers had already seen the Grand Canyon from 39,000 feet.

Be a friend to those of us who fly the friendly skies frequently and print this. It might help.

J. E.

DEAR J.E.: I also fly the friendly skies frequently, and concur. (Captain, oh, captain, are you listening?)

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago a man we employed for many years in our retail business left us to open his own store — in competition with us. No particular ill will was involved, but we were not overjoyed since we had taught him the business from the ground up.

We continue to do well, but this man has done even better because he has a better location.

A friend of ours seems to take a perverse pleasure in constantly pointing out our competitor's ads in the newspaper, and talking endlessly about what a fantastic success he has made in such a short time. We are bewildered and somewhat hurt.

Are we overly sensitive? we feel very uncomfortable having to listen to this subtle form of needling every time we're in this person's company.

Any suggestions?

READER

DEAR READER: One who makes a habit of bringing up an irritating subject is bad news. The Chinese put it this way: "Never speak of a rope in the home of one whose relative has been hanged."

If I were you, I would demote this "friend" to a nodding acquaintance.

DEAR ABBY: We don't go to church. Instead, my husband and I and our three children sit down to a hearty breakfast on Sunday morning and afterwards have a friendly discussion around the breakfast table.

We talk about school problems, family gripes and relations with relatives and friends. We support each other in overcoming bad habits and faults and come to an understanding about allowances, TV watching, homework and chores. Then we seek ways to improve family life and ways to contribute to our community and our nation.

We believe that God's spirit is within us (all) and that ours are helping hands which can be used to make this spirit evident here on earth.

Recently, some of the neighborhood children have been calling our children "atheists" because we don't go to church. They are shocked and upset and don't know what to answer. Do you in your wisdom have an appropriate answer?

AT A LOSS

DEAR AT: How is this: "We are NOT 'atheists.' We accept the existence and influence of God in our lives. But to us, God's spirit is within all of us, and we offer helping hands which can be used to make this spirit evident here on earth."

(P.S. In my opinion, yours is a stronger religious commitment than many churchgoers make. But that, too, is their business.)

DEAR ABBY: SHELDON'S WIFE couldn't understand why her husband came home with red smudges on his shirt and red hairs on his coat. Don't jump to conclusions, Abby. He may have been feeding strawberry jam to a cocker spaniel!

CHATTANOOGA DOG LOVER

DEAR LOVER: True. But there is always an outside chance that he had been feeding a line to a redhead.

A ROLLING RULING PEN

In a pinch you can make a ruling pen that lays a nice fine line — and doesn't muck up your ruler — from a discarded glass cutter.

Simply drill a ⅛-inch hole in the handle just above the cutting wheel (this both enlarges the space that surrounds the wheel, and gives it a keyhole shape). Then pack the opening with felt scrap and soak the cloth with whatever ink you plan to use. This handmade writing utensil will lay down quite a line on each filling of its tiny reservoir.

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

Dear Dr. Cotter: I am a 13-year-old female and have a problem with my parents. My parents are so overprotective it's not funny. I'm not allowed outside the house after dark.

Every time someone calls me up (mostly male) and wants me to come out, if it's after 7 p.m. I'm not allowed to. It's embarrassing to be going with a guy and not be able to see him after school hours.

What can I do to make them understand that I'm growing up and can take care of myself?

Dear Dr. Cotter: I am a 13-year-old girl and my problem is I was asked out by a guy in school I really like. I said "yes."

My mother doesn't know and if she ever found out she'd kill me. And I'm scared one of my friends might tell her.

I don't know if I should still go out with this guy I really like or if I should break off with him just in case my mother finds out.

Dear Dr. Cotter: I am 14 and I'm going out with a 15-year-old guy. My parents don't give me enough freedom and they are also old-fashioned. They can't accept the fact that times have changed.

I barely get to see my boyfriend because he works and because of my parents. If I want to go out, they usually don't let me. When I do go out, I have to be home at 8 p.m., even on weekends.

Their excuse is "You're a girl and a girl's place is in the home." I'm sick and tired of being treated as mommy's little girl. Now is supposed to be the most exciting time of my life, so how can I enjoy it when my parents are stopping me?

Answer: It's hard to help all three of you, who represent about three hundred thousand across Canada. I disagree about 14 being the most exciting time of life — I would say 54 — but it may be the most excitable time of your life, and that may be what your parents are afraid of.

Pity your parents. Everything else in life comes in packages with a list of instructions on how to use, care for, repair, and with a one- or five-year guarantee.

Children don't. It's true there are some rules for babies — keep one end wet and the other dry, administer tender loving care. But babies never stay that way: They grow up and want to be people, too. And the rules for people are not hard and fast. What happened when your parents were adolescent is only a slight guide to what happens now. What the parents next door do is only slightly better.

Perhaps my advice on this question should be addressed to parents. You have to take some positive initiative, instead of always saying "no" — you could train a bird to say that — or echoing things about wonan's place being in the home.

Take your children into partnership, junior partnership, and work out some mutual responsibilities, duties and privileges. They will be fairly reasonable, probably as reasonable as you are, and they may start being honest with you. And you with them. Perhaps a teacher or a priest or a "Y" worker could be consulted to help.

Otherwise you are going to have rebellions, deceptions, pregnancies, and running-away on your hands, and the kids will grow up not having learned a thing.

Dear Mr. Vichert: I have a problem I do not know how to overcome. I am a 14-year-old, and people tell me I'm good-looking. I have no problems talking to boys or girls. I can joke around and I have plenty of friends.

The problem is I'm very loud and mouthy when I am kidding around. Everyone knows I'm always kidding. I realize how foolish I look so I try to quiet down. The moment I'm under control, someone asks me what's wrong.

I think this "false front" is what turns guys off because I have never been asked out. (I've had a few calls but I don't know how to deal with them.) I know I'm shy and insecure and that is why I act the way I do. Please give me some advice on how to overcome this because it has been going on for years.

Answer: I believe you are well on your way to solving your problem. You have spent some time thinking about yourself, and have determined what you feel you need to change. You are willing to ask for help. The fact that you have done this much makes me think that you are not as insecure as you think you are.

It takes courage to look at oneself, determine a factor that you want to change, and then ask for help. I think you should know, also, that many young poeple grow fast physically but not so fast in their social skills.

Learning how to behave socially takes time and practice. Don't worry too much about being awkward. Relax and let your own growing and experience help you.

Dear Dr. Powell: I have just turned 14 and I haven't had my period yet. Is that normal?

Answer: It is prefectly normal for a girl of 14 not to have started menstruating. There is quite a bit of variation in the age and rate at which girls mature.

Probably many of your friends have been menstruating for several years but there are some like you who are a bit older and have not yet had a period. If you have other signs that you are maturing, stop worrying. If your breasts are developing and you are growing taller and have hair growing on the pubic area you will soon begin menstruating. These are signs that puberty has arrived.

If you are still concerned and want to talk to someone, talk to your mother. Maybe her periods began when she was older. The public health nurse in your school would be another source of information. But stop worrying. I am sure you are perfectly normal.

An IUD (intra-uterine contraceptive device) is generally a small flexible piece of sterile plastic which is inserted into the uterus to prevent pregnancy.

The 12-page illustrated folder The Intra-Uterine Contraceptive Device explains how the IUD works and its advantages and disadvantages. It also points out that with an IUD in position, pregnancy rarely occurs.

An IUD has to be inserted by a doctor or a trained nurse. After a miscarriage many doctor, prefer to wait a few weeks until the uterus has shrunk.

Although an IUD can be used for many years, a yearly pelvic examination is advisable.

For a doctor or trained nurse it is quite easy to remove an IUD with forceps. The device cannot be re-used and has to be discarded. Removal is painless.

Furthermore, the folder points out that an IUD does not affect sexual relations. Neither partner can feel the device during intercourse.

Illustrations of various IUDs are included.

Fur Pieces Recycled

TORONTO (CP) — A second-hand fur salon has opened here.

Owner Marianne Heller, 48, takes the furs on consignment from people who want to get rid of their furs, but also want to make some money.

Already she has had in stock a white mink coat, an oyster beaver coat and a Russian broadtail coat with sable collar.

WHAT'S TWILIGHT SLEEP?

your health

By L.L. COLEMAN, M.D.

What is meant by twilight sleep? — Miss E. R.

Dear Miss R.: I presume the term was created because twilight is a period between positive light and complete darkness.

Twilight sleep is a state of lowered consciousness or sedation following the combined use of the drugs morphine and scopolamine. This combination of drugs is often given to patients before they are taken to the operating room. This helps to reduce their emotional tension and also to increase the safety of general anesthesia.

Patients who are in a state of twilight sleep can respond to instructions, but the experience is almost totally forgotten.

I have a close friend who has a dropped bladder. She is very nervous and will not see a doctor. Would you please give me advice as to what she can do if she continues refusing to see a doctor — Mrs. B. K.

Dear Mrs. K.: Forgive me for asking, but are you yourself the "very close friend" who refuses to see a doctor? Frequently, I have the feeling that readers ask questions about non-existent friends or relatives because they don't want to admit they are the person with the problem.

There are few choices open to anybody immature enough to refuse to see a doctor. I must assume that the diagnosis of "dropped bladder" was made by one. Therefore, "she" probably did see a doctor at some time.

The choice is very simple. Either she continues to have the symptoms and ceases to complain or else does the more mature thing and returns to the doctor for some specific treatment.

The urinary bladder is a hollow organ situated at the bottom of the abdominal cavity. The bladder collects the urine that is excreted by the kidney and expels it through the urethra to the outside.

The bladder is a muscular organ and therefore changes in size and shape depending on the amount of urine within it. When it enlarges, messages are sent by way of the spinal cord to the brain. That is how one knows when to empty the bladder.

Like all other organs, it is susceptible to infection, inflammation, growths, stones, and a variety of other disorders. As it is suspended by ligaments and muscles, a "dropped bladder" can occur if these suspensory ligaments are inadequate.

The highly refined techniques that are now available can remedy bladder disturbances both medically and surgically. Unless this is done, a relatively simple problem can become a complicated one.

Now, Mrs. K., if you are as close friend as you say you are, you must urge your friend to return to her doctor as a preliminary step in her return to health.

A brilliantly conceived diagnostic machine will soon be used at the University of Michigan. The machine is a by-product of this era of nuclear medicine.

Dr. John W. Keyes invented the instrument. It is a combination of a gamma camera and a computer. Used with radioactive substances, it can provied three-dimensional information about body organs. Mounted on a long arm, the camera revolves 360 degrees, and with a computer produces a series of tomograms.

It is now possible to spot even a tiny fragment of the heart wall and show exactly where the blood supply is insufficient. Dr. Keyes named his creation "the humongotron" because it is so ungainly in size and shape.

Maybe Not Discreet But Tastefully Sexy

By JOANNE WINSHIP

NEW YORK (UPI) — According to fashion designer John Anthony, his spring-summer 1979 collection is based on refined, discreet sex appeal.

Sexy it is. Discreet it isn't.

At least not that shimmering black charmeuse number whose strapless bodice is curved low in front and opened to the top of the thigh.

Or the black halter top, plunging even lower in front with satin lace appliqued on tulle barely covering the bosom, the wrap skirt slit up to there. Or the sheer boucle sweaters covering nothing.

However, we have to admit that Anthony's brand of sex is so far the best and most seductively elegant of the current New York showings. His good taste is always apparent and his color palette and interplay of textures are beautiful.

There are plenty of suits with little short-sleeved surplice wrap tops that fold around the body and are held by a belt, and there are suits without jackets as well.

A black linen with a small four-button jacket and slim wrapped skirt low in front and slit on both sides is superb. Little jackets go over John Anthony's slip tops and bustiers (strapless bodices that are molded to the body).

He has used bright colors such as jade, emerald, fuschia and pink, albeit dextrously and with caution. They particularly compliment black linen suits.

There are two skirt shapes. One is wrapped, slim and flat in front. The other is a slightly draped, sarong type. Jackets have wide straight padded shoulders and narrow down at the hips. Sheer boucle sweaters or silk lace encrusted on tulle go under them for day or night.

There are lots of pants, cut full but flat at the front and rolled at the ankle; in silk tweed, linen and silk jacquard. Dotted silk jacquard pajamas are lovely. Short-lace, unlined evening dresses in ivory, peach, mushroom and peanut garnered shouts of bravo at the showing.

There are no floor length evening dresses, only ankle length. The only accessory is the crushed-reptile belt in myriad colors.

While the evening clothes are room-rockers, the day looks are equally good. The outstanding ovation at the end of the show was appropriate.

Hanae Mori's show was professionally choreographed and her models danced and skipped to the beat of Jamaican calypso to exhibit an upbeat, with it spring-summer 1979 collection for her boutique and couture. Styles are much younger than usual and more diversified.

She opened with short, tiered silk dresses over tights. Corded ribbon goes over one shoulder and around the waist. Next, Peking soldier pantsuits, straight and strict, in navy, khaki, bone and vanilla linen, their jackets open to reveal halter tops or slip tops in gay prints.

Other special Mori offerings are amusing moire sailor suits with big balloon bloomers in red, white, navy and plum; a slim white cotton pants suit over a bandeau top; and crinkled cotton shot with lurex for pants worn with loose shirts and dresses with kimono jackets.

Silk dresses are shirred and horizontally stitched, giving them a tiered effect. Punjab pants with bat-wing, sleeved jackets reveal one pieced strapless jumpsuits, very new. Multi-patterned island prints in crepe de chine have one shoulder bared and delightful sarong skirts. These are worn with a whimsical, jeweled fish dangling from one ear.

For the young are short satin disco dresses in emerald green, cerise and turquoise and white polka dots on black, green or navy taffeta with strapless ruffled bodices. Mori's colors are bright and many are eye-boggling.

At all national championship tournaments, side games are played every morning, afternoon and evening. These side games are set up primarily for non-expert players who play simply because they enjoy the game. And, as is usual, the unusual frequently occurs in these games. As an example, observe today's deal, which came up in a side game at a recent national tournament.

Neither side vulnerable.
North deals.

The bidding:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ | 1 ♡ | 1 ♠ | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

North, after due deliberation, decided to open with one club. East's overcall of one heart was quite normal. South's one-spade response was a marginal call, but subject to no criticism. West, although he had a good hand, didn't know what to bid (any expert would have found himself in the same predicament). So West passed, figuring that he would have another opportunity to take action, since, according to the rules, North had to provide a guaranteed rebid.

But North, evidently having misgivings about his opening bid, decided to pass. And when East also passed (instead of rebidding hearts), South became the declarer at a one-spade contract.

The board's jack of clubs was played on the opening lead, and East's ace captured the trick. East returned the nine of hearts, West taking the trick with his singleton ace. Next came the nine of clubs, covered by dummy's queen and ruffed by East. The queen and king of hearts were then cashed, West discarding thereon the three and king of diamonds. East now played back a diamond, which West ruffed.

When West now led a third club, declarer put up dummy's king, which East ruffed with the jack of spades. South overruffed with the queen. Declarer then led a spade to the ace, after which he returned dummy's remaining spade. West now took the last five tricks with his ten and king of spades, plus three high clubs. So declarer incurred a five-trick set, for a loss of 250 points.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, November 22, 1978
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on personal possessions, valuables, payments and collections. Bring priorities into focus. Be aware of responsibilities, special relationships, costs. Older individual, possibly a Capricorn, is very much in picture. Basic services, dependents and pets are part of scenario.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You strike chord of universal appeal. Domestic adjustment, possible residence change could be featured. Popularity increases. You receive "token of affection." Luxury item, art object is in picture. Libran figures prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Spotlight on land, real estate, defining terms, getting agreements in written form. See situation in light of reality, push aside tendency towards self-deception. Pisces, Virgo persons figure prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Emphasis on settling differences, dealing with relatives, catching up on calls, correspondence, recognizing responsibilities. Capricorn figures in scenario — and so does a short trip. Your sense of security will be heightened.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You get facts concerning special commodities, cash flow, income potential — and you get green light for display and distribution. Aries, Libra figure prominently — and so does the number 9. Complete assignment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A bright, new world could open for you. Be confident, create, imprint, express views in independent, original manner. Yes, Leo is involved. Accent personal opinion, judgment and intuition. Member of opposite sex cares — and will prove it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may be "in the dark." Situation — or condition — is temporary. You're on brink of recovery — or discovery. Chase shadows of fear and doubt. You regain sense of direction — and digestive disorder can be righted.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Diversity, display humor, versatility, willingness to ask and answer questions. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently — so does the number 3. New horizons open — obtain hint from Virgo message. Yes, do accept invitation to social affair.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on area of Solar horoscope related to career, boss, major objective, community, civic projects, self-esteem. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio persons could be involved. Be thoroughly familiar with material. You probably will be tested!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): What seemed out-of-reach may actually be close at hand. Know it, act accordingly. Emphasis on education, travel, finding something in common with a "special" person. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius figure prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Dig deep, be persistent, get beneath layers of superficiality. You could strike "riches." One close to you has valuable information concerning acquisition, savings or investment program. Major domestic change, adjustment could be "just around the corner."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Let others have spotlight. Work quietly, meditate. Know that being alone is not same as being lonely. Emphasis on understanding what is expected of you, what you can give and what you can get in return. Another Pisces could be in picture.

IF NOVEMBER 22 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a "rebellious visionary." You were separated from parents at early age, physically or in psychological sense. Scorpio, Aquarius persons play key roles in your life. In 1979, greater fulfillment for you. If single, you could marry. There will be travel, change, creativity, intensified relationships. If married, there could be an addition to family. March and December could be your most memorable months of next year. In restrospect, you might choose April of 1979 as a pressure-cooker, challenging month. You are not easy to forget, nor are you easy to live with or understand.

Ontario Demands Richards' Sentence Appeal

TORONTO — Ontario's attorney-general has asked federal Justice Minister Otto Lang to order an appeal of the sentence of Rolling Stones' guitarist Keith Richards for heroin possession, a spokesman for the attorney-general's office says.

Richards was sentenced Oct. 24 to one year's probation and ordered to give a benefit concert for the blind after he was convicted of possessing 22 grams of heroin.

The spokesman for Attorney-General Roy McMurtry said Monday the request asks Lang to decide by the end of this week whether to allow an appeal.

McMurtry cited public concern that the sentence imposed by County Judge Lloyd Graburn was not a sufficient deterrent, the spokesman said.

In a letter to Lang, McMurtry said that Richards can be described as a teen-age idol, "whose mores and values are trendsetters amongst our younger generation."

"For that reason, I am of the view that a term of imprisonment is crucial to deter like-minded individuals who may see fit to emulate Mr. Richards's attitude to the use of drugs," the attorney-general's letter said.

Author Hailey Calling It Quits At 58?

TORONTO — Arthur Hailey, the British-born millionaire author who lived in Canada for 20 years, says he is retiring.

"Nobody believes me, but it's true," Hailey, 58, said while visiting the city.

Hailey, who moved to Toronto from Britain in 1947 but left Canada for California in 1967, said he is under pressure from his publisher to reconsider because of the money his books gross.

"I've never found writing easy," he said. "Now I'm enjoying just going to the office in the morning and opening the mail."

Asked if he will write again, Hailey replied. "Well, I do have an idea for a novel . . . ."

Hailey, who now lives in the Bahamas, was in Toronto to get his eyes tested.

His latest novel, Overload, about the energy crisis, is to be published in early January.

Other Hailey novels include The Moneychangers, Wheels, Airport, Hotel, In High Places and The Final Diagnosis.

Liquor, Pill Mix Kills Scott Newman

people

LOS ANGELES — The son of actor Paul Newman died Monday in a Los Angeles hotel room of an accidental overdose of alcohol and a tranquilizer, authorities said.

Allan Scott Newman, 28, was found in a room at the Ramada Inn in West Los Angeles, where he had been staying since last Tuesday, police Lieut. Tim Wapeto said.

Newman was taking pain pills for injuries suffered in a motorcycle accident, police said, and police are presuming, pending an autopsy, that those pills combined with the alcohol to cause an overdose.

Young Newman was an actor, stuntman and part-time singer who appeared primarily as a nightclub entertainer under the name of William Scott. He also played in the Paramount movie Fraternity Row.

Authorities said he had been under the care of a psychologist, Scott Steinberg, an associate of the psychologist, took Newman to the motel at 11:50 p.m. Sunday from West Hollywood.

Wapeto said Steinberg told them he noticed Newman was having difficulty breathing shortly after midnight and called paramedics. They treated Newman before taking him to Los Angeles New Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

Merry-go-Round From Quebec

How many rock devotees out there in the Greater Victoria area have heard about Maneige?

Probably not many. But the Quebec-based sextet is branching out across the country and everywhere they perform their effect is to rouse standing ovations and superlatives from the critical press. Maneige translated means merry-go-round and there are six riders on this one, all accomplished multi-instrumentalists.

The group pays its first visit to Victoria Saturday, bringing its special collage of sounds and styles, its vitality and humor to the University Centre Auditorium where it will perform a single concert, starting at 8 p.m.

Ostensibly a progressive rock band, Maneige deeply exoplores the worlds of folk, jazz, pop and even classical revealing a remarkable versatility among its members.

The founder, 27-year-old Alain Bergeron, will be offering some delicate flute music at one moment, the next blowing a throaty tenor sax.

Paul Picard is master of a variety of percussion instruments from tabla to marimba and Vincent Laglois diversifies himself all over a battery of keyboards. Denis Lapierre doubles on piano and guitar and only drummer Gilles Scheltagne and bassist Yves Leonard remain with their instruments throughout.

Japanese Village Presents
'TEPPANYAKI'
Seven delicious acts. But no surprise ending.
What is Teppanyaki? A variety of tender, Japanese style steaks? Exquisitely seasoned shrimp, lobster or chicken? A ritual drama? The most fun you and your friends can have sitting down? Yes!
Enter your personal chef. And in a flash of blades, a flourish of spices, there's your meal. Cooked precisely to order right before your eyes.
It's a delicious performance - with no surprise ending. Japanese Village Teppanyaki prices range from $7.95 to $13.95 each. For everything. Delicate Shabu Shabu Consomme. Yaki Yaki Shrimp appetizer. Fresh, crisp Hibachi Vegetables. Main course. Rice. Japanese Tea. Dessert. Everything.
Some night soon, get the group together and take in the show at the Japanese Village. You'll eat it up.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If nnu have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Forget BCR Report, Let's Build the Railroad: Barrett

NDP leader Dave Barrett says the royal commission into the B.C. Railroad caused an unnecessary delay of more than a year and wasted $1.3 million.

The former premier said the commission spent all that money and took all that time to tell the obvious — a railroad is a costly operation.

"With all due respect to the royal commission . . . now that it's over, let's get on with building the railroad," he said.

The commission, headed by Mr. Justice Lloyd McKenzie, was highly critical of the operation of the trouble-plagued, money-losing railroad and strongly recommended the government divest itself of the line.

The commission suggested the province try to sell the operation to Canadian National Railways, or failing that, create a Crown corporation to run the line.

It urged that the Dease Lake extension be abandoned permanently. Work has been halted on the extension for more than a year.

The report also called for the abandonment of the Dawson Creek spur and said if the economic situation doesn't improve, the line should be shut down south of Williams Lake.

It says the BCR's disastrous plunge into the North will cost the public more than $360 million over the next 10 years.

But Barrett pointed out the government puts $357 million annually into the provincial highways system which doesn't generate any money.

And like highways, the railroad is important for the economy.

"The BCR report hasn't changed my position one bit," he said, adding that the logical north-south transportation link is along the Dease Lake extension through the Yukon into Alaska.

Alaska understands and is willing to negotiate, he said.

Barrett said an international rail route could be run along the lines of the St. Lawrence seaway.

He claimed the Socred government ordered the commission to delay having to make a decision on the railroad's future and to cover up the out-of-court settlements it had to pay contractors on the line.

The commission was supposed to deal with the cost overrun cover-ups, but it didn't, Barrett said, and as a result, the taxpayers of B.C. still don't know how many millions of dollars in out-of-court settlements the M.E.L. Paving fraud cost them.

Bennett, meanwhile, just back from holidays, refused to see reporters on the matter of the BCR report.

His press secretary said he is too busy to discuss the findings of the commission.

Blue Uniforms Coming Back, League Told

The Navy League of Canada would rather fight than switch.

More than 220 people attending the annual awards dinner of the league's Vancouver Island Division were told the league does not intend to give up its fight to retain the traditional blue uniforms for Royal Canadian Sea Cadets.

Jack Koyl, immediate past national president, and president of the Naval Officers' Association (NOA) of Vancouver Island, said the NOA has been asked to donate seaman-type uniforms for both the Naden and Stadacona regular force bands.

"If they get them, the seaman-type uniform will come back to the regular force through those two bands," he said. "Don't give up boys. We've got those seaman-type uniforms coming some day."

Earlier at the dinner in Sidney's Sanscha hall, Gerry Bishop of Victoria, member of the league's national council, said issuing of green uniforms to army and air cadets had been completed by Oct. 15 and the controversial green uniforms were now to be issued to sea cadets.

Trophies for the best and most improved sea cadet corps on the island were awarded to RCSCC Alberni of Port Alberni while the best Navy League Cadet Corps was judged to be th Rear-Admiral Finch-Noyes corps of Nanaimo. The most improved Navy League cadet corps was the Vice-Admiral H.A. Porter corps of Campbell River.

The Beatrice C. Day Corps of Duncan received trophies for the best and nost improved Navy League Wrenette corps.

The Navy League and NOA Sea Cadet of the Year awards went to CPO Frank Varga of Sidney's Admiral Budge corps. PO Norman Schmidt of Campbell River received the Navy League Cadet of the Year award. The Navy League Wrenette of the Year was PO A.M. Klawer of Duncan.

The Admiral Finch-Noyes corps received the award for best Navy League cadet or wrenette band and PO F. Greavette of Nanaimo was judged best drum major. The trophy for deportment and best-dressed band went to the Beatrice C. Day corps.

Service awards were presented to Lt.-Cmdr. George Riddell, Cmdr. Bill Conconi, Lieut. S. Hawkes and D. Neil. Capt. A. Galbraith and Lt.-Cmdr. Ken Neilson received honor certificates. Receiving testimonials were Lieut. Peter Auger, W. Hein, I. Somerville, B. Galbraith, Anne Murphy, I. Clarke, D. Greavette, M. Shortt, E. Keene and W. Werner.

An award of appreciation was presented to the Sidney and Saanich Peninsula Kiwanis Club for its financial assistance toward the Saanich Peninsula branch's new Admiral Martin Navy League cadet corps.

Awards also went to Capt. Randy Dykes and Capt. John Strand in appreciation for their work with sea cadets aboard the weatherships Quadra and Vancouver. Snow also received an award in appreciation of his work with the cadets.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CHOOSING YOUR HEDGE

GARDENING
jack beastall

When it is decided that a hedge is needed along a property line, the owner usually wants a full-grown hedge in a hurry, but rarely is prepared to pay the price of large specimen plants.

The large plants are already six to eight years old and have been properly pruned each year to keep them full at the bottom to make a tight hedge.

In addition, the plants have been lifted each year and replanted to keep the roots in a small ball that can be safely transferred to the customer's garden. All this takes time, and time costs money.

It is possible to buy small plants of the same kind for considerably less money, but the customer will have to do the training and pruning to obtain a similar specimen in the same number of years.

Usually home gardeners are seeking some kind of a hedge plant that will give the required privacy or boundary protection in one season, not in six or more years hence.

There are fast-growing plants which will make a barrier of a kind in a few years, but they have serious faults and are not advised for hedges around a single lot garden.

A plant which makes rapid growth does so because it has a fast-spreading, invasive root system which ranges far and wide in search of the food required to maintain such growth.

When this type of a hedge is planted at the edge of a lawn which is fertilized every month from April to September and copiously watered to keep it green, the roots from the fast-growing hedge material spread beneath the turf and the grass dies back at a rate of about one foot a year.

Little is gained when a planted border is placed between the hedge and the lawn. Soon the border will have to be fertilized because the plant are making poor growth from loss of food to the hedge. The border is soon a tangle of hedge roots just below the soil surface and the border plants slowly succumb.

Whether this rapid growth is objectionable, and whether the lawn or the border plants survive, there is another problem to face.

About once in every decade these quick-growing hedges are killed in a winter cold spell because the growth is rapid and soft, unable to take low temperatures.

The dead hedge, especially when composed of quick growing coniferous plants, becomes a fire hazard which many municipalities will not permit alongside a public sidewalk.

To remove such a hedge and its extensive root system can be more costly than thought possible, plus a lot of garden upheaval, and the gardener is back at square one.

There are some plants which will make a hardy, slow-growing hedge, and these are the one your nurseryman will recommend. It is wise to take his advice, for you will have a hedge that will last and improve with age.

Just as important as choosing the right plant material is to look into the future, and if a hedge is likely to be needed, get it planted with the slow-growing material before the matter becomes urgent.

Mom Pleads for Autistic Child

MAPLE RIDGE (CP) — The condition of a 14-year-old Maple Ridge girl with severe autism is getting worse because the provincial government won't pay enough to allow her to attend a special school, the girl's mother says.

Children suffering from autism are unaware of what is going on around them and withdraw into themselves. They must also have someone with them at all times.

Donna Duckhorn had been attending Arthur Peake school in this Fraser Valley community, accompanied by a community services worker, who is paid by the human resources ministry.

However, Donna's worker moved this fall and the ministry has balked at paying for a replacement worker, said Phyllis Duckhorn, the girl's mother.

Mrs. Duckhorn said nobody has volunteered to pay the substantial costs of the needed one-to-one care for her daughter. She said Donna now spends her days at home and her autism is getting worse.

"When Donna is in school her behavior improves, her vocabulary improves and her attention span increases," she said. "She's more content because the school provides her with the needed structural environment."

Merv Davis, district supervisor for the ministry, said taxpayer demands that the government cut costs have hurt expensive individual programs first.

"It's a matter of how big a bill the public is willing to pay," Davis said. "There's somewhere along the line where the costs begin squeaking."

Education Minister Pat McGeer said last week that the provincial government has set up a special committee within the education ministry to deal with the problems of schooling for handicapped children.

Children with minor handicaps will continue to be educated within the school system, but those who need special attention will have their cases referred by the local school board to the committee.

Helen Casher, school board chairman, said the board is waiting to hear the committee's policy before taking any further action in the case.

Adaskin Presides

Speaker Unwanted

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 75 economists from seven colleges and universities in British Columbia have protested the choice of the ambassador of South Africa as luncheon speaker at today's conference of the Association of Professional Economists of B.C.

In a news release, eight representatives of the protesting economists say it was inappropriate to invite ambassador Norman Best "who would, presumably, discuss the opportunities for expanding B.C.'s trade with an investment in South Africa, and attempt to cast his country's policies in a favorable light."

Dr. Murray Adaskin, one of Canada's best-known composers, will be speaker and will introduce two special concerts celebrating Canada Music Week at Victoria Conservatory of Music this week.

The concerts will take place at Craigdarroch Castle Thursday and Friday at 8 p.m.

Composers whose works will be presented include Robert Fleming, Leslie Mann, Francois Norel, Jean Coulthard, Murray Adaskin, Keith Bissell, Elliot Weisgarber, Richard Johnston, Rod Sharman, Anthony Genge, Sylvia Rickard and Norma Beacroft.

Featured will be the premiere performance of Dark, for solo tenor recorder by Malcolm Forsythe of Alberta. James Kennedy will be the flutist.

Market Board Denounced

At least one of the province's 13 marketing boards has come under severe criticism from the government's multi-party standing committee studying agriculture in the province.

The committee recommends the Interior Vegetable Marketing Board be dissolved although some of its functions could be assumed by another board.

In one of the five volumes that will eventually emerge from the committee on marketing boards, the committee's research staff concludes the interior vegetable board is the worst example of a marketing board operation in B.C.

"It has not expanded demand for vegetable products, it has mismanaged its own affairs causing significant financial losses to producers and taxpayer and, further, has apparently lost the confidence of a large portion of its producers," the report says.

The report which was released Monday covers about half the marketing boards and although it was less critical of the other boards, did make a number of recommendations for improved service.

The committee's study on grape growing concludes current viticulture research is too slow to respond to industry needs.

"A healthy and expanding wine and grape industry in B.C. will require the support of adequate ongoing research into both the practical aspects of viticulture and wine making as well as the economic and marketing aspects."

The report also notes the B.C. grape industry produces too many grape varieties not suited to wine making and recommends the development of a non-wine grape processing industry.

Other recommendations:

—Mushroom production is expanding so rapidly, its marketing board must undertake a thorough examination of markets to ensure growth in this field.

—The cranberry marketing board has little effect on the industry so should either be disbanded or take a more active role in the industry.

Still to come are the committee's analyses of marketing boards that have jurisdiction over poultry, dairy, sheep and oyster products.

$50,000 JEWELRY THEFT

Thieves used a ladder to gain entrance to Tasar's jewelry store in The Empress Hotel to steal rings, bracelets and pendants.

Victoria city police said today they still don't have a full count of the jewelry stolen from several display cases.

Hotel sources said the loss could run as high as $50,000.

"There was a sizeable quantity of jewelry taken," said a police spokesman.

Store manager Richard Arora is out of town and unavailable for comment.

Disco Fire . . . Owners Charged

The operators of a downtown Victoria disco have been charged with arson after an investigation into a $200,000 blaze at the club Oct. 17.

Charged are Anthony J. Mettes, 20, who gave his address as 504-1039 View, and Paul Leonard Taylor, 24, of Langley.

Mettes was taken into custody in Qualicum Monday while Taylor was arrested in Vancouver.

The two men appeared in provincial court and were remanded in custody for 24 hours for a bail hearing and election of trial method.

Police and fire department investigators opened a probe into the fire at Hobo's Teen Disco in the Duck Building, 1316-1322 Broad, after witnesses testified hearing several explosions shortly before the fire broke out about noon.

PUZZLE OF VANISHED CULTISTS

Missing 400 Butchered?

Times News Services

Guyanese troops searched the jungle today for hundreds of U.S. cultists who fled from a mass suicide in which more than 400 others died, some shot but most poisoned by a mixture of Kool-Aid and cyanide.

The most perplexing question left to be answered was the whereabouts a remaining 400 other people whose bodies have not been found.

There was speculation that hundreds of people fled to the jungle and simply have not yet found their way out. There also was another theory: That some of the Jonestown security men took hundreds of the commune's residents to a remote area, possibly to be shot.

Lending some support to that theory was the fact that the body of Tom Kice, one of those believed to have been among the gunmen who attacked Congressman Leo Ryan's party last Saturday in the incident which sparked the jungle bloodbath, has not been found.

Also, lawyers Mark Lane and Michael Garry, who escaped into the jungle when the killing began, reported Monday that they hard scattered screaming and shooting.

The bodies of sect leader Jimmy Jones and his wife were among 409 corpses which a police spokesman said Guyanese troops had counted in and around the meeting hall in Jonestown. One reporter who visited the scene said it "looked like a garbage dump where somebody dumped a lot of rag dolls."

Jones and several others had been shot, presumably by themselves. The others had drunk Kool-Aid into which the camp doctor mixed cyanide.

Also found at the camp was $500,000 in cash and some jewelry. Unconfirmed reports also said $500,000 in gold and hundreds of social security cheques had also been found.

Fifteen survivors were reported found, three in the camp and 12 who came out of the jungle. Estimates of the missing ranged from more than 375 to more than 775. An exact estimate was not possible because reports of the settlement's total population ranged from 800 to 1,200. Most were from California, headquarters of the sect.

One of the survivors found im Jonestown, a 26-year-old teacher named Odell Rhodes, said after Ryan left the settlement, Jones announced by loudspeaker that he had ordered the congressman and the journalists with him killed.

Rhodes said the the suicide was ordered after the killers returned to Jonestown with word that some of Ryan's party had escaped to report what happened and what they had found in the settlement. The survivor said the settlers had been rehearsing suicide for months so that they could kill themselves if their way of life was seriously threatened.

Meanwhile, a flag-draped coffin bearing Ryan's body was returned to his home town of San Francisco today for burial.

It was met by Ryan's former wife, Margaret Ryan Williams, and three of his five children, Kevin, 27; Patricia, 24, and Shannon, 21, and about 30 friends and other relatives.

An eight-sailor Navy honor guard removed the gray metal casket from the four-engine jet and placed it in a black hearse for the drive to a nearby mortuary.

About 60 reporters and photographers were on hand.

Remaining in the plane were two other caskets, containing the bodies of San Francisco Examiner photographer Gregory Robinson and NBC cameraman Robert Brown, who also were killed in the attack last Saturday. The C-141 was to continue on to Los Angeles with their bodies.

★ 'They Began With Babies'

By CHARLES KRAUSE
Washington Post

PORT KAITUMA, Guyana — When the Rev. Jim Jones learned that Rep. Leo J. Ryan had been killed but that some members of the congressman's party had survived, Jones called his followers together and told them that the time had come to commit the mass suicide they had rehearsed several times before.

"They started with the babies," administering a potion of Kool-aid mixed with cyanide, Odell Rhodes recalled Monday when I revisited Jonestown to view the horrifying sight of 405 bodies — men, women and children, most of them grouped around the altar where Jones himself lay dead.

Rhodes is the only known survivor of Jonestown who witnessed a part of the suicide rite before managing to escape. He was helping Guyanese authorities identify the dead.

Most of those who drank the deadly potion served to them by a Jonestown doctor, Lawrence Schact, and by nurses, did so willingly, Rhodes said. Mothers often would give the cyanide to their own children before taking it themselves, he said.

But others who tried to escape were turned back by armed guards who ringed the central pavilion where the rite was carried out, Rhodes said. They were then forced to drink the poisoned Kool-aid and shortly after the mass killings began, Rhodes said, "It just got all out of order. Babies were screamng, children were screaming and there was mass confusion."

It took about five minutes for the liquid to take its final effect. Young and old, black and white, grouped themselves, usually near other family members, often with their arms arund each other, waiting for the cyanide to kill them.

Second Mideast Summit Needed?

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel today approved a U.S.-drafted peace treaty with Egypt but rejected as "unacceptable" a timetable for Palestinian autonomy, leaving the talks deadlocked and possibly in need of a second summit meeting.

The Israeli cabinet voted 15-2 at the end of a six-hour session to approve a U.S. draft treaty drawn up a month ago that ties it to an over-all Middle East peace settlement. The cabinet had earlier rejected the pact.

But the approval today did not meet Egypt's demand for a specific timetable for Palestinian autonomy on the occupied West Bank and the Gaza Strip, leaving the talks that began Oct. 12 still stymied and perhaps again requiring intervention by President Carter.

"The latest proposals of the government of Egypt are inconsistent with the Camp David agreements and unacceptable to Israel," Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said in a prepared statement read to reporters.

He said both sides could start negotiations on the timetable after a treaty is signed. But Egypt wants a commitment before the signing.

Government sources said if Egypt reacted favorably to the cabinet decision, Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defence Minister Ezer Weizamn will return to Washington by the end of the week.

Israel's argument has been that it will not go beyond what was agreed at Camp David.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said Monday he would welcome another three-way meeting and an Israeli official said the Jewish nation would have no objections to such a conference.

Meanwhile in Baghdad, a self-styled Arab People's Court Monday found Sadat guilty of high treason and usurping power through his peace initiative toward Israel.

The court, presided over by Sultan al-Shawi, sentenced Sadat in his absence to be stripped of his nationality.

★ BUS BLASTED

BEIRUT (UPI) — A powerful explosion ripped through a busload of Syrian peacekeeping soldiers today as it was passing through the mountain town of Aley, police sources said today.

No accurate casualty figures were immediately available, but initial reports from the town 12 miles east of Beirut said the bus was full and that a number of soldiers had been killed or wounded.

It was not immediately clear if the explosion was caused by a bomb placed inside the bus itself or in a car near the bus at the time of the blast. The explosion occurred as the bus was passing through a traffic circle in Aley.

Residents of Aley said several shops were set on fire near the bus.

The mountain town of Aley is in territory controlled by Syrian troops of the Arab League peacekeeping force, which were sent to Lebanon two years ago to end Lebanon's civil war.

The Syrians have been involved in major fighting with rightist Christian militias since the end of the 1975-76 civil war.

Workplace Alcoholism: Women Outpacing Men

TORONTO (CP) — More working women than working men have alcohol problems, a University of Waterloo study indicates.

"It's surprising because the common notion has always been that men drink more than women," said Gail Vibe, 25, co-author of the study.

Miss Vibe and Rob Thistle, both graduate psychology students, recently investigated the drinking habits of more than 500 full-time university employees.

The study showed that while the frequency of drinking by men and women was about the same, women drank more on each drinking occasion than men.

The average for women was about 3½ drinks each time, the average for men slightly less than three.

In the under-25 age group, men drank more frequently than women. But among those aged between 51 and 55, women drank more often than men. In the over-56 age group, men were the heavier drinkers.

In both men and women, the younger and better-educated persons tended to be the heavier drinkers. The study found no definite relationship between drinking and job satisfaction.

The consequences of drinking were different for men and women. More men than women said it caused absenteeism and poor performance at work.

"Women seem to be able to cover up better than men, both socially and at home," Miss Vibe said.

Herring Men Reject Offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Herring fishermen on British Columbia's southwest coast have voted 97 per cent to reject the fishing industry's latest contract offer of $96 a ton for herring, a union spokesman said Monday.

The spokesman for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union said fishermen along the rest of the coast are still voting, but the results are expected to be much the same.

Union president Jack Nichol had recommended that union members reject the offer from the Fisheries Association of B.C.

The spokesman said the next move is up to the industry.

Meanwhile, union members have also voted solidly to tie up boats at noon Dec. 7 and launch a demonstration here the following day outside the hotel at which the next Canada-United States fishing treaty negotiations are to be held.

The union has accused Canadian negotiators of selling out to the U.S.

16 Await End

PASPEBIAC, Que. (CP) — Sixteen people have settled into this remote area of the Gaspe peninsula to wait for the end of the world—and they believe it will come this winter.

The five men and 11 women, aged between 18 and 31, are the remnant of a group of 29 who installed themselves earlier this year in a hand-built log house.

The remaining 13 unbelievers have apparently given up the vigil in the wilderness, about 500 kilometres northeast of Quebec City.

Tories Win 11 Yukon Seats

WHITEHORSE (CP) — The Progressive Conservatives elected 11 members to the 16-seat legislative assembly in Monday's territorial election, giving the party a majority in the first Yukon election fought on party lines.

Conservative leader Hilda Watson, however, lost in her own riding to Liberal Alice McGuire, one of the first two native Indians to be elected in the territory. Ms. McGuire received 188 votes in the Kluane riding to beat Mrs. Watson by 38.

With the number of seats increased to 16 from 12, the Liberals won two seats and the New Democratic Party won one. Two independents were elected.

NDP leader Fred Berger was also defeated, finishing second in Klondike riding. Berger polled 130 votes, 22 less than Conservative winner Meg McCall.

The other native Indian elected to the previously all-white assembly was Conservative Grafton Njootli, who outpolled his Liberal opponent, 59-29, in the riding of Old Crow.

Party leader Iain MacKay was the other victorious Liberal, winning in the riding of Whitehorse Riverdale South. He polled 420 votes to 354 for Conservative Maggie Heath.

Mrs. Watson said her loss marred "what was a fantastic night for celebration in the Yukon". She said she might resign as leader, adding that she would not run in a byelection in order to lead the party from inside the assembly.

Light snow fell in some areas of the 536,000-square-kilometre territory populated by only 23,000 persons. About 80 per cent of the 9,750 eligible voters cast ballots.

THE time has come, says Michiko Lambertson, co-ordinator of the Inter-Cultural Association, for the majority to stop avoiding the issue and start speaking out for the minority groups in B.C. She says it's only the columnists and other public figures who have a negative view of different races who get the media attention

A Victoria woman who witnessed the race problems in the U.S. says she has seen racism here — subtle and not so subtle

Let's Hear It From the Majority!

Times Staff

MICHIKO Lambertson feels it is time the majority group in B.C. and more specifically in Victoria took a strong, public stand against a growing attack on minority cultural groups.

She is co-ordinator of immigrant services for the Inter-Cultural Association of Greater Victoria and in that capacity has seen examples of racisim in the city, some of it subtle, some not so subtle.

It reminds her of the early 60s in Chicago where she had come from Japan to get her masters degree in sociology.

During those years of turmoil when blacks rose up in anger over their place in American society, white people really took a stand, she said in a recent interview.

"They spoke up in favor of the minority group."

That is not happening in B.C. today, says Michiko, who came to Victoria seven years ago. It is only the newspaper columnists and other public figures who have a negative view of different races who get any media attention.

"There is nothing from the majority, who really should stand up and say something.

"I think people are really trying to avoid the issue."

Aside from her immigrant services duties, Michiko also heads up the Multi-Cultural Women's Group, formed in January to help immigrant women adjust to a new culture as well as act as an advocate in cases of injustice or discrimination.

There is a core group of about 30 volunteers, women from a smorgasboard of cultural backgrounds, who are available to help out with any problems.

Included in Victoria's melting pot of various cultures are Chinese, East Indians, Filipinos, Spanish, Portuguese and those from the Latin American countries.

The women's group tries on the one hand, to help the immigrants get to know the Canadian culture as well as show them how they can share their culture with others.

Michiko, and others interviewed on the work of the women's group, said if such assistance is not available, newcomers to the country tend to isolate themselves with other members of their culture instead of adjusting to their new one and sharing what they have with others.

Aside from the general adjustment problem there are also individual problems, like finding homes and jobs for immigrants or helping out in cases of physical handicaps or marriage breakdown where there is a cross-cultural marriage.

Buncy Pagely, born in Victoria but with East Indian ancestry, says she sees a definite improvement in the last little while as a result of the work of the women's group and the inter-cultural association.

She says five to 10 years ago there were few services for immigrant women and as a result those of different cultures "would remain isolated and just stay with their families."

The women agree that the way to combat racism or cultural bias is through communication, getting people together on a one-to-one basis in order to dispel the various stereotypes one group has about another.

Janis Kirker, secretary for the inter-cultural association, says the beauty of mixing with people from all different cultures is that the stereotypes soon disappear and people "become just persons."

The strange feature of our society is that people tend to tolerate intolerance, she says, rather than be intolerant of intolerance.

The current swing toward racial intolerance, the women agree, is due in part to the tough economic times and the unemployement situation. This is something that has happened down through history, they add.

"We see that kind of thing when times are tough and competition for jobs is great," says Janis.

And Victoria has its share of racists as well.

Sometimes it rears its head more obviously in the form of hate literature or racist slogans. Or in the form of public petitions, like the one taken in the Uplands area protesting the efforts by a family from a minority group to buy a house in the area.

There is also discrimination in the sale of houses and the renting of accommodation but these cases are more difficult to prove.

But it's there and the only way to combat it is by education, particularly in the early school years, the women agree, as well as with groups like theirs which attempt to bring together people from different cultural backgrounds and help them understand the positive side to having a mix of cultural backgrounds in the community.

Michiko says it is time people stopped giving lip service to racial tolerance and multi-culturalism and begin to come out in public with strong, positive attitudes about the mix of people in the community.

Changes Urged To Boost Voting

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier and Greater Victoria school board chairman Susan Brice both believe legislative changes are needed to stimulate better voter turnout in local elections.

But whereas Couvelier wants the right to punish non-voting electors by having their names removed from the voters' list, Brice says the provincial education ministry must recognize the difficulty created in a school district whose component municipalities hold unsynchronized elections.

Saturday's municipal election and referendum in Saanich attracted a 23.3 per cent turnout, but in the school board election in Victoria only a dismal 4.8 per cent of eligible voters cast ballots for school trustees.

The over-all turnout for the school board election was 15.4 per cent.

Brice said today the disappointing Victoria figure was entirely predictable.

"I could see this coming a mile off," she said. "You didn't have to be a political whiz-kid to predict it."

She recalled that when Victoria city council decided two years ago to scrap annual elections in favor of the biennial pattern, she suggested the school board investigate the feasibility of doing likewise.

But when she inquired at the education ministry she was told it couldn't be done due to the different voting frequencies between the municipalities in the district.

The only candidates eligible would have been those living in the city of Victoria, because Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt would still be holding annual elections.

"We (trustees) are elected at large, and the change would have given us in effect a quasi-ward system," Brice said.

She said the ministry indicated at that time it had no plans to change its policies in line with the trend toward biennial elections.

Couvelier said Monday the deletion of non-voters' names from the list would require a change in the Municipal Act.

"It would cause people some inconvenience getting their name back on the list and make them realize the importance of exercising their democratic right."

He said he also believes more voters would go to the polls if election day were held midweek instead of the traditional Saturday.

Poison Dumping Blamed In Death Of Coho

Federal fisheries officers suspect a poisonous substance dumped into Craigflower Creek wiped out this year's coho run.

About 30 coho salmon were found Monday floating in the creek near Helmcken Road bridge.

"We have ruled out lack of oxygen," said Barry Huber of the federal fisheries protection branch.

"We conducted tests and the oxygen content of the water was adequate to support fish."

He said some of the fish have been sent to the fisheries research station in Nanaimo to try and pinpoint the cause of death.

The fish were found not far from Portage Inlet.

Huber said the coho, full of eggs, were apparently on their way to spawning grounds higher up Craigflower.

He said there was no sign that other species such as cutthroat trout were killed.

MOTORCYCLIST DIES

A Victoria man died Monday afternoon in Royal Jubilee Hospital from injuries received in a motorcycle accident Friday night.

James Corbett, 28, of 3005 Shakespeare, was thrown 100 feet when his bike collided with a car at Bay and Fernwood.

Corbett never regained consciousness.

Vantreight Refuses To Resign

Saanich Ald. Geoff Vantreight says he will not resign his council seat or step down as bylaw enforcement committee chairman because his sons technically trespassed on municipal property in building an unauthorized drainage basin at Panama Flats.

Talking to reporters after Monday night's council meeting, following his return from a holiday in Hawaii, he said: "I've done no wrong, why should I resign?"

He denied that he had broken any municipal bylaws or used his elected office in any way to further his own interests.

Vantreight left on vacation two weeks ago, soon after admitting that his sons Ian and Michael had built the concrete drainage basin on municipal land without permission, to prepare for a potato farming operation they hope to start next spring.

During the alderman's absence last week several council members including Mayor Mel Couvelier strongly criticized his involvement in the affair, and said his conduct had been unethical.

But Vantreight insisted Monday night that in meeting council colleagues on his return they had not repeated the comments "to my face."

He issued a lengthy press release deploring the "unwarranted attacks on my and my family name," and providing further information on the background to the affair.

Among other facts Vantreight noted that the municipal property at Panama Flats (near Interurban and Hyacinth) has been zoned as farmland for some time but has not been farmed because of flooding problems.

It was common knowledge that Saanich wanted to rent the land. When his sons contacted municipal officials with that in mind they were led to believe municipal cooperation would be forthcoming.

"The municipal officials indicated that approval would likely be a formality as the proposal complied with municipal planning for this area. My sons therefore proceeded," he said.

Vantreight stressed he was not "trying to get anyone from Saanich municipality in trouble" and did not believe there should be any criticism of their conduct.

He continued: "The unfortunate fact is that farmers have to move quickly if they are to get their land in shape for spring planting. My sons did not have time to tie up all the loose ends. Potatoes don't understand red tape and neither do farmers!

'Their First Venture on Their Own'

"Throughout my sons' actions I was kept aware of what they were doing, and in fact assisted them where possible. I was giving them the benefit of my knowledge and experience in what was going to be their first venture on their own."

Vantreight said his sons submitted an offer to lease the municipal land on which the drainage basin had been built, and provided a deposit.

But as it could appear their father as an alderman would be receiving an indirect benefit, in violation of the Municipal Act, municipal officials advised them to withdraw their application to rent the property.

"By this time, the ditches had been built and the cement structure was in place."

(Council was informed last week that construction work on the basin was carried out Oct. 23, two days before Ian and Michael Vantreight submitted the offer to rent the municipal land).

Vantreight commented in the press release on the irony that, far from receiving preferential treatment, his sons may be prevented from using farmland to grow potatoes because their father is an alderman.

"If they were just ordinary citizens, it is likely that everything would have gone ahead, they would have been able to enter into a lease with Saanich and this whole controversy would not have arisen."

He said he hoped Saanich citizens would judge the project objectively, and not be overly influenced by the "'head hunting' which is currently going on."

Vantreight told reporters he would resign only if Saanich decided to lease or rent the land to his sons, so that he would comply with the Municipal Act's prohibition against an elected representative having any direct or indirect contract with the municipality in question.

But in that case, he said, he would transfer the land title and run in the byelection created by his resignation.

TOWN TALK

Low and behold . . . or should that be Low and begone?

For the first time since the Memorial Arena opened in 1948 there'll be no Ice Capades show this pre-Christmas season.

And it's all your fault, Max Low, for saying those nasty things about the show in your Times column last year.

At least, that's the explanation given by Memorial Arena box office staff to a disappointed resident who tried to book seats this week.

They're kidding, surely? But no, according to city recreation manager Jack Morgan the Big Max Attack of last December is the reason given by the company for not coming to Victoria this year.

"They were very hostile about the article . . . he called them bush league and said so much in the column that was not true," Morgan said.

But what's the real reason?

Morgan does concede that the Ice Capades' net take from Victoria has dwindled in recent years due to increasing costs, although he denies the fans had been deserting.

"I guess it was a tough struggle coming to Victoria in the last three or four years, and that (Low's article) seems to have been the last straw."

It's Worth a Flutter

Publicist Kay Lines believes there's a way out of the Victoria Symphony's financial mess that's so obvious no one has thought of it.

Why not approach Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy for funding assistance from the provincial lottery fund?

"It's very simple and I can see no particular reason why they shouldn't go for it," Lines says. "It's at least worth a try."

Dirty washrooms. Shabby stations. No information available about schedules. Sound like a description of affairs on the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway?

Wrong. It's the McKenzie royal commission describing passenger service on the province's own railway, the BCR. A Vancouver Islander notes some remarkable similarities between the E & N and the BCR in their passenger operations. Both use self-propelled Budd cars and while the BCR operates on roughly twice as much track, the complaints heard about one apply equally to the other.

Commission researcher Kenneth Bayne reported on the BCR:

"Frequency and reliability, equipment, terminal facilities and on-board services have fallen far behind that offered by competing modes, making rail passenger service undesirable as a method of travel."

And more on the BCR . . .

The Socred government dropped the massive four-volume, long-awaited royal commission report on the railway at 4:26 p.m. Friday and cabinet ministers have been hard to find ever since.

Government politicians had the entire weekend to analyse it but as of today, not one cabinet minister could be found to talk about the report and its "dump-the-BCR" recommendation.

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, whose South Peace River riding relies heavily on the railroad, was conveniently on holiday.

Premier Bill Bennett, who's minister of transport and who overruled an earlier interim recommendation of the commission that the Fort Nelson link be shut down, was just back from vacation and too busy to see reporters, said mother hen (press secretary) John Arnett.

Yet the premier found time Monday to issue a press release taking most of the credit for the turnaround decision that will see passenger service continued on the E&N.

Could it be that the royal commission is so highly critical of the government-run railroad, it has driven the cabinet into hiding until ministers can figure out some answers?

There's nothing like a first-hand look at the consequences to get the seat-belt idea across.

Students at the University of Victoria and Victoria high school will get an opportunity this week to view the Insurance Corp. of B.C.'s seat belt convincer.

The convincer — a crash simulator which depicts the effectiveness and importance of seat belts — will be at the university Wednesday and the next day at Vic High.

Too Hot to Handle

A frank speech about women in the Canadian political system by Saturday Night executive editor Christina McCall Newman Monday proved a little too strong for the Victoria Mens' Canadian Club.

The club decided Newman's speech, originally entitled Sex and Power in the Canadian Political system, was a little too hot to handle and needed toning down.

So they omitted the word sex from the invitation cards.

YOUR MERRY CHRISTMAS STARTS...NOW

Too early? Not for Christmas shoppers, party hosts and parents of energetic children. The more planning and preparation you undertake now, the merrier your holidays will be later. It's no fun being at the low end of your energy level when the season is at its height. So, a special C-FAX-SAFEWAY publication that provides lots of Christmas planning and gift-giving ideas right now, while you still have lots of time and energy at your disposal.

But, inside these pages, you will find much more than Yuletide hints and ideas. You will discover the thoughts on the traditional side of this special time, a delightful Christmas tale for youngsters, an opportunity to share your good fortune with less fortunate Victoria children, and, (at a time when we all reflect on the past year), a glance back on Victoria Airforce activities.

Lots of good reading . . . in preparation for a great holiday.

CONTENTS

FROM YOUR OWN HANDS: ——— 3
Gifts you make yourself often mean the most both to you and the receiver. Lois Smith provides some ideas for easy-to-make presents.

CHRISTMAS FOR COOKIE MONSTERS: ——— 3
Arlie Straw has collected some yummy ideas guaranteed to empty cookie jars.

THE AIRFORCE IS FLYING: ——— 4
What has been keeping the C-FAX fliers "up in the air" this past year? Their listeners. A retrospect on the year's activities of the people with the familiar voices heard on 1070.

A PRESENT FOR SANTA: ——— 5
Eleanor Crowe's charming story is designed for the wee ones in the family, and provides a nice way for parents to answer that awkward question youngsters ask at this time of year. Set a time aside and read it aloud, to the children.

HAVE A MERRY (AND ORGANIZED) CHRISTMAS: ——— 6
Ohmygosh. Unexpected guests. What to do? All sorts of things, suggests Eleanor Crowe . . . but do them now, and you will worry less later.

FROM MANGER TO MARKET PLACE: ——— 9
Christmas means more than the turkey-and-tree celebration most of us enjoy. Arlie Straw talked with some of the area's church leaders to discover their feelings on the festive season.

THE OTHER SHEPHERD: ——— 9
An "eye-witness" account of that special night, by Arlie Straw.

CHRISTMAS: A WHOLE WORLD OF CELEBRATIONS: ——— 10
It may be turkey and stuffing for most of us, but others do things differently, as Lois Smith discovered when she talked with Victoria people who call other countries home. Special recipes, too, to add an international "flavour" to your own celebrations.

CHRISTMAS CRAFTS

FROM YOUR OWN HANDS

BY LOIS SMITH

While a carefully selected Christmas present says a lot for your thoughtfulness, there's something extra special about making your gifts. Those who give them feel special, and so do the people who receive them.

If you sew, knit, crochet or macrame, you're probably making your Christmas gifts now. If you don't have these skills, or simply can't find enough hours in the day, here are some simple, easy-to-make gifts that don't require a great deal of time or expert knowledge, gifts for children to make, and gifts for you to make yourself.

FLOWER PICTURES

This is an idea that will keep children happily occupied, and grandparents especially will cherish a gift made by little hands.

Materials:
cardboard or board, glue, dried flowers, grasses, coloured paper, scraps of fabric, wool, and whatever else is handy, decorative tape.

Method:
Just make "pictures" by glueing the flowers, wool, paper cut-outs, etc. to the background, and then create a frame with the tape around the edge of the cardboard.

Children find this easy and fun to do. They'll be as proud of the results as the people who receive them.

WEAVING

This is simple for children to do, once you've set it up for them.

Materials:
piece of cardboard, about 6" by 6", straight pins, coloured string or wool.

Method:
Stick straight pins into all 4 edges of the board about ¼" apart. Using a long piece of string or wool, create the "woof" by tying string to one pin at the top left corner. Then wind it back and forth across the board until you reach the opposite corner. Knot it, and cut off loose ends. The child can then weave the "warp" in and out, using different colours and textures to make abstract wall hangings, place mats or whatever.

CHRISTMAS COUNTER MATS

Make festive counter mats for yourself and your friends.

Materials:
2 or 3 counter hot mats, plain and patterned fabric, elastic.

Method:
Trace the hot mats on plain fabric, then cut fabric 1½" larger. Decorate by zig-zag stitching, blind-hemming or glueing on patterned fabric cut in bells, balls and Christmas trees. Stitch the hem as a casing, insert elastic, and slip over the counter hot mats. After the festive season, slip the covers off and save them for next Christmas.

APRON AND TEA TOWEL SET

This attractive idea can be adapted to any special occasion.

Materials:
two cotton tea towels, in Christmas patterns or colours, 2 yards of wide, grossgrain ribbon.

Method:
Cut the ends of the ribbon at an angle and hem. Gather the long edge of one tea towel to the required size, centre the ribbon, and stitch. Then wrap up the apron with the matching tea towel.

FOAM BLOCKS

This is a dandy to make for very young children. They're colourful blocks made from foam, so that chubby little hands can grip them easily, yet come to no harm.

Materials:
(for 12 blocks) 9" by 12" piece of 3" thick foam, fabric scraps in varying patterns and colours, iron-on fabric.

Method:
Cut foam into 3" squares. For each block, cut six 4" squares of fabric (giving ½" seam allowance). For each block, cut 2 letters or numbers from iron-on fabric, and iron them onto 2 squares. These are the "base" and "lid" for each block. With right sides together, hand or machine stitch 1" square to each side of the "base". Stitch the sides to form a box, then turn right side out and insert foam. Turn under the raw edges of the "lid", and blind-stitch it to the block.

BEDSIDE RUG

Make older children their very own, personalized rug, to keep feet warm on cold winter mornings. It's very quick and easy.

Materials:
fur fabric, felt.

Method:
Make a newspaper pattern for a rectangular, oval or giant foot-shaped rug. Cut fur fabric to pattern, then cut felt 2" larger. Stitch the fur rug to the felt rug, and trim felt with pinking shears. From felt scraps, cut the child's name or initials in block letters. Pin letters in position, centred or across the corner, and stitch on the fur rug.

Because it's personalized, they have the thrill of knowing you've made it just for them!

The ideas here don't take a great deal of time, or require expensive investments in materials. Many can be made from things you already have on hand. But all of them have one thing in common. They're gifts from your own hands, and that makes them special both to you, and the person to whom you're giving them.

Merry Christmas!

CHRISTMAS FOR COOKIE MONSTERS

BY ARLIE STRAW

From the tree with the star on top, to the lumps of coal old Black Peter leaves for naughty children . . . there are as many ways to celebrate Christmas as there are homes to celebrate it in. But North, South, East or West . . . when friends come a-calling over the holidays, we all have one happy tradition in common: good things to nibble on, flavored and shaped and decorated as our mothers did before us. Like the honigkuchen that Victoria baker Otto Tiemann remembers from his early childhood in Germany.

Otto's blue eyes twinkle like old Kris Kringle's himself, as he describes the chewy golden marriage of honey and almond and other good things he makes each year at his Gingerbread Bakery in Esquimalt. Topped with apricot-glaze and almonds set in neat patterns, and served in generous squares, honigkuchen is not only easy to make, it's downright habit-forming!

At the Dutch Bakery on Fort Street, baker Schadderlee votes for Kerst Kranz . . . buttery puff pastry folded lovingly around a centre of almond paste, and baked in a golden ring, with a tart-sweet glaze on top. The Schadderlees grind their own almond paste from imported Spanish nuts, but the almond paste you buy at the supermarket serves equally well, and you'll even find puff pastry all ready to roll in the frozen food department.

. . . But for Jack Galbraith, head baker at Robertshaw Specialty Pies, nothing says "Christmas" like substantial slices of his famous Melton Mowbray pies. And I nibbled away contentedly at a slice as I watched him line a bread pan with flaky pie dough, and fill it to the brim with a spicy mixture of pork in its own jelly-making juice. Covered and sealed with a tight fitting topper of more pastry, it's baked to a gorgeous golden brown. Then it's chilled and served in neat-jellied slices along with a plate full of cheese and pickles and other good things.

Up Lancashire way, they make lacy molasses cookies, and roll each one around the handle of a wooden spoon as they come hot from the oven. Cooled to a crisp, they make delicate little tubes of spicy sweetness to go hand in hand with a whipped cream filling. If the cookies start to cool and get brittle before you have them all shaped, just pop them back in the oven for a moment to get soft and warm again.

Did you ever try filling little baked pattie-shells or meringues with sophisticated (but easy to make) French creme, flavored with your favorite liqueur? Top with grated orange peel, chocolate curls, or other flavor-matching garnish for something very "Parisienne".

THE C-FAX AIRFORCE IS FLYING... IN MORE WAYS THAN ONE

This is a season of celebration, and—at a time so close to the end of 1978—a time of reflection. Looking back, the air-crew of C-FAX 1070 and all the men and women who have kept it flying throughout the year, have discovered that they have all kinds of extra reasons for celebration. 1978 has been a very good year, not only for the "Victoria Airforce", but also for its listeners, all over Victoria

AN EAR ON CANADA'S FUTURE

The year was not without its crisis, but within every crisis lies an opportunity to strengthen and enrich our lives. In 1977, the national pre-occupation was one of Canadian Unity. With a feature radio documentary "Break-Up Of A Country", C-FAX news personnel provided listeners with an arresting "crystal ball" vision of our future. But, the question remained: how did Victoria people feel about the issues confronting both French and English-speaking Canadians?

C-FAX 1070's "One Canada" programming provided the answer. Literally dozens of local business people, educators, politicians and —in a unique essay competition— school students shared their feelings with listeners, as their thoughts and voices were featured on the air throughout a six-week period. It was this programming that gave C-FAX the prized Station-of-the-year award for all of British Columbia. Imagine the delight of News Director Terry Spence and his staff as they discovered that they were winners of two prized news awards bestowed by the Radio Television News Directors Association. The Dan McArthur Award was presented for the C-FAX documentary, "Charlie—The Story Of An Alcoholic", a program that has since been utilized as a Counselling aid by Alcoholics Anonymous and the Armed Forces of both Canada and the United States. Then came word of recognition in the Association's "Community Leadership" category, with an Honorable Mention award presented for the C-FAX "Listeners Speak Out" series, in which residents broadcast their own "editorial opinions". Special recognition, in both cases, for special programming.

AIRMEN GO ON RECORD

Something special is, at this moment, being offered to Victoria listeners from C-FAX good-humour man Steve Ivings, who has recorded his hilarious version of "The Twelve Days Of Christmas" on a 45 RPM record. Turn it over and you can laugh along to the silly saga of "Fearless Dwight", who is not only slow on the draw, but even slower on the up-take. Helping Steve tell the tall tale is the C-FAX Morning Mayor, Barry Bowman.

Barry has been as busy off-the-air as on the air. Peter Chipman's recording of "Everybody's Writing Songs" (co-written by Barry Bowman) climbed the national hit chart about the same time that the radio personality-song writer added stage direction to his list of accomplishments. Early in the new year, Barry's Playhouse Seven company will present the war-time thriller "Stalag 17" to McPherson Theater audiences. (Anyone remember how the traitor sent his messages to the Nazis?)

AIRMEN BECOME CRIME-FIGHTERS

Throughout the year, other C-FAX personalities devoted their talents to off-the-air projects. Paul Mann, Creative Director, Rich Mole (who doesn't spend all his time in movie theaters, after all) and Promotion man Alan Perry produced three major audio-visual programs for use in communities throughout the province, and municipalities here, on Southern Vancouver Island. Beginning with a Neighborhood Watch program for the Saanich Police Department, the team moved on to a gripping narrative about teenage drinking for the provincial Government's Counter Attack committee, and recently completed, for the B.C. Police Commission, the commercial crime prevention presentation, "Partner In Crime" for use in business communities.

The topic of crime prevention and road safety figured prominently in other awards to C-FAX this fall. In addition to recognition in commercial catagories, C-FAX was the recipient of The Canada Safety Council trophy for its outstanding Graduation drinking-and-driving messages heard last May.

AND NOW, THIS WORD FROM OUR LADIES...

Glancing back over the year, it has occurred to us more than once that, at least for C-FAX listeners, every day is Ladies Day. The day begins for many of us, with Arlie Straw's cheery look at the weather . . . and anyone who can induce our smiles on a gray, damp November day deserves our thanks. Thanks come from listeners all over the area to Arlie every week, for her thoughtful, sympathetic editorials.

Relative newcomer Bev Sinclair who journeyed to C-FAX from Kelowna (along with good-looking, good sounding hubby Rich Jones) earlier this year, adds her intelligent and entertaining news features to the Paul Mann Show each weekday morning.

Throughout the day, Suzanne Hansen's on the beat; school board, city council, hospital board, union meeting . . . and on the scene; fire, demonstration, accident. You'll find Suzanne wherever news is happening and wherever the newsmakers are gathered.

More of the news is gathered by Marlaina Gayle, the newest member of the CFAX news team, who mans 1070's legislative desk.

And, in the wee hours, late-night listeners find warm, friendly Shelley Wright a nice companion at the beginning—or at the end—of their day with C-FAX.

A PRESENT FOR SANTA

BY ELEANOR CROWE

It was the week before Christmas and Toby's mother was very excited—just like him. But also very busy—not like him. Toby felt itchy all over. Not itchy as in mosquito bite itchy but itchy to be DOING something. When his mother, who was baking cookies, said, "Toby, quit fidgeting," he tried very hard. He even held his breath. But his elbows began to act as though they had hiccups. And then his shoulders and his knees and his toes had hiccups too. Toby was having a terrible time. Finally his mother sighed, just a little, and said "Toby, why don't you play outside for a while," and she helped him into his warm clothes.

Now Toby lived in Victoria and in Victoria there's never any snow at the right time—like Christmas or just before—so Toby couldn't build a snowman like the ones he'd seen on TV or Christmas cards. He kicked at a few old leaves. He leaned against the fence and wiggled the latch on their gate. Then he had an idea. He would build a mudman! He began—right where his mother had her flower garden in the summer. He had almost finished when he heard someone call, "Hi, Toby!" and he looked up with a big smile because the person was Aunt Patti and she always made him feel happy. When Aunt Patti got close enough she saw the mud. All over Toby's clothes. All over Toby's face. Then she saw the big holes he'd made digging in the flower garden to make the mudman.

"Oh, TOBY!" she said and covered her eyes with one hand.

"Oh-oh," went a little voice inside of Toby.

"Mmmmm," said Aunt Patti. Then she took Toby inside.

"Oh NO!" said Toby's mother.

"Oh-oh," went the little voice again.

His mother started to laugh when Aunt Patti explained about the mudman and Toby stood on the mat near the door with his head down feeling a little bit silly and a little bit hopeful. When you're only four, that's about all you can do. Then Toby's mother explained to Aunt Patti that she'd been busy and hadn't paid much attention to Toby. She gave him a kiss on his muddy face and his aunt asked "How would you like to come downtown with me and see Santa?"

That was just fine with Toby so he had a VERY quick bath and got into clean clothes and away they went on the bus.

Downtown they went into a big store and rode up the escalator to the toy department. Toby was so excited about the Christmas lights and beautiful toys he hardly knew where to look first. Then—he saw Santa!

"Would you like to talk to him?" asked Aunt Patti.

Toby nodded "Mmmmm-hmmmm", so he sat on Santa's knee and talked and was very happy.

"Now," said Aunt Patti after Toby said good-bye to Santa and wished him a Merry Christmas too, "where would you like to go?

"I think I'm kind of hungry," said Toby.

And Aunt Patti said, "Well I have just the answer," and they went out of that store and into another.

That's when things went wrong.

In the second store Toby saw another Santa. He tugged at Aunt Patti's hand. "Who's that?" he said and then he marched straight up to the second Santa who said "Ho ho ho!" just like the first one. Toby looked at him very carefully. This one had brown eyes instead of blue like the first one.

"Who are you?" asked Toby.

"Santa," said that Santa.

"But there's only one Santa!" cried Toby, "and he was in the other store!" Big tears began to roll down his cheeks. "I don't believe you," he said.

Aunt Patti picked him up in her arms and said, "Toby, you mustn't be rude," but Toby didn't care about being rude or not rude. He just wanted to know who was who. He was quiet all the way home on the bus and while Aunt Patti explained to his mother what had happened. Then Toby's mother sat down beside him and talked about Christmas and Santa Claus. When she was almost finished she said,

HAVE A MERRY AND ORGANIZED CHRISTMAS

BY ELEANOR CROWE

With the holiday season getting closer, we look forward to entertaining friends and family and we're faced with the question of what's easy to serve, when time and energy are at a premium, as well as easy on the often already strained budget. What follow are some "make-ahead" dishes which store well in the freezer and a few, which with minimum notice and preparation, can be served with pride to hungry guests and family. An added advantage—they'll be a welcome change when you just can't stand one more bite of turkey.

BORSCHT—or Cabbage Soup

A hearty meal-in-itself soup that both vegetarians and non-vegetarians will enjoy. A country soup, it should be served piping hot and accompanied by thick slices of home made bread or biscuits. Great for lunch or dinner it's also a welcome change from too many too rich foods.

Put 2½ quarts of water to boil in a large pot. Add ½ cup of mashed canned tomatoes (from a 28 ounce tin). When water is boiling, drop in 5 or 6 large potatoes peeled and cut in half. Grate 1 large carrot and add along with 1 small chopped onion. While this cooks, put 3 tbsp. butter into a small pot and add ¾ of a cup of finely chopped onion. Saute without browning and then add the remainder of the tin of tomatoes, also mashed. Allow to simmer until a thick sauce.

Next, in a small frying pan melt another 3 tbsp of butter and add 2 cups of finely shredded cabbage and fry until tender but not brown. Shred another 2 cups of cabbage to be used later.

When the potatoes are tender, remove them from the stock and mash in a large bowl with ½ cup of sweet cream. Set aside. Add 1½ cups of diced potatoes and ½ cup of the tomato-onion sauce to the stock. When diced potatoes are tender add 2 tbsp of butter and the 2 cups of raw cabbage. Bring just to the boiling point but don't let it boil. Reduce heat or set the pot to the back of the stove and add the mashed potato mixture stirring well to remove all lumps. Add the fried cabbage. Now add the remainder of the tomato-onion sauce and stir well. Shake over the top of the soup a bit of black pepper and dry dill leaves—not seeds. The borstch is now ready to serve but improves by "resting" for a few hours. Or you can freeze it for future use.

CHICKEN CASHEW RICE

The phone rings. It's Aunt Martha etcetera and they're arriving in an hour and staying for dinner thank you. Forget murder. Take a deep breath and use this recipe so easy to prepare on the spur of the moment—if you haven't already got it stored in the freezer. The quantities given are adequate for four hungry people but the recipe is easily adjusted to serve more.

Saute until golden brown, 8 chicken thighs. In a 2 quart casserole, mix 3 cups of raw rice, 1 large diced and sauteed onion, 2 chicken bouillion cubes dissolved in a small amount of hot water, 1 cup of broken cashews and about a teaspoonful of herbs . . . basil, thyme and sage are a good combination. Now pour enough cold water in to just barely cover the rice. Arrange the chicken on top of the rice mixture and cook in a medium oven for about an hour.

CABBAGE ROLLS—Vegetarian and non-vegetarian.

Whether meat or vegetarian, cabbage rolls take kindly to freezing and served with your favourite salad and hot biscuits make a meal your family and guests will want to have repeated.

Remove the leaves from 2 or 3, depending on size, cabbages—savoy is the easiest to use—and pop them into a large pot with a small amount of water. Steam until the leaves fold easily but are not limp. In a large bowl, mix 2 pounds of ground beef with 2 cups of cooked rice and one medium onion which has been chopped and sauteed in butter or margarine. Drain the leaves and into each leaf place about 3 tbsp of the meat mixture. Then roll the leaf around the mixture, envelope style, and place in a roasting pan. Mix 4 - 14 ounce tins of tomato soup with 1½ tins of water and pour over the rolls. Top with onion rings and, if you like Hot foods, a sprinkle of crushed chilis. Bake at low heat—about 250 degrees for 4 hours or, if you're planning on freezing them, 3 hours so that the re-heating doesn't overcook them.

VEGETARIAN CABBAGE ROLLS

The procedure is exactly as above except that the filling consists of approximately 6 cups of cooked rice, 1 medium onion diced and sauteed and ½ cup of soy grits.

In making either of the cabbage rolls I often make mini rolls by cutting the leaves in halves or quarter. They make great cocktail size treats for an evening party.

EGG ROLLS

These can be made normal size by purchasing egg roll wrappings from one of the small Chinese stores on Fisgard or can be made bite size using wonton wrappings. They're easier to make than you might think and something that comes out of the freezer and re-heats quickly when you want them.

2 packages of wonton wrappings
1 cup of mung bean sprouts
¼ cup of finely diced fresh or canned mushrooms
2 tbsp of finely diced celery
2 well beaten eggs

Combine shrimp, bean sprouts, mushrooms and celery and add about 2 tbsp of the beaten egg. Place approximately 1 tsp of shrimp mixture just in from one corner of the wonton skin. Fold that corner over the filling and then fold the two side corners in. Finally roll over so that the last corner is on the bottom of the roll. Place each roll as rolled on a large platter and let them sit for about 15 minutes. While waiting, heat oil for deep frying. Dip each roll into the beaten egg and drop it into the oil. Cook until golden brown and then drain. Keep hot in the oven if they're to be used immediately or cool and freeze. Serve accompanied by plum sauce and hot mustard for dipping.

TREATS FOR A COOKIE MONSTER

SPANISH TORTA DE ALMENDROS

Mix 1¼ cups of butter with 1¼ cups of sugar, and cream well. Add one egg, and beat till fluffy. Then beat in one and one quarter cups of sifted flour, two and one quarter cups of ground almonds, and 1 teaspoon almond extract. Turn into a buttered 9" spring form, brush the top well with two tablespoons of heavy cream and add a generous dusting of more ground almonds, then bake 50 minutes at 325 degrees . . . cool . . . and enjoy.

"LIKE-HONEY" CAKE

Cream together 2 cups of sugar and 4 eggs. Add ⅔ cup strained honey, 1½ cups unblanched, slivered almonds, and mix well. Mix together 5 cups of flour, ½ teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon allspice, 1 teaspoon cloves, and add to creamed mix. Then add ¾ cup of candied orange peel, and ¼ cup of candied lemon peel, and chill thoroughly. Spread chilled mixture on a greased cookie sheet, and bake in a moderate oven for about 30 minutes. Then cool, glaze with apricot glaze, and decorate with sliced almonds.

A SIMPLE SOLUTION FROM SAFEWAY

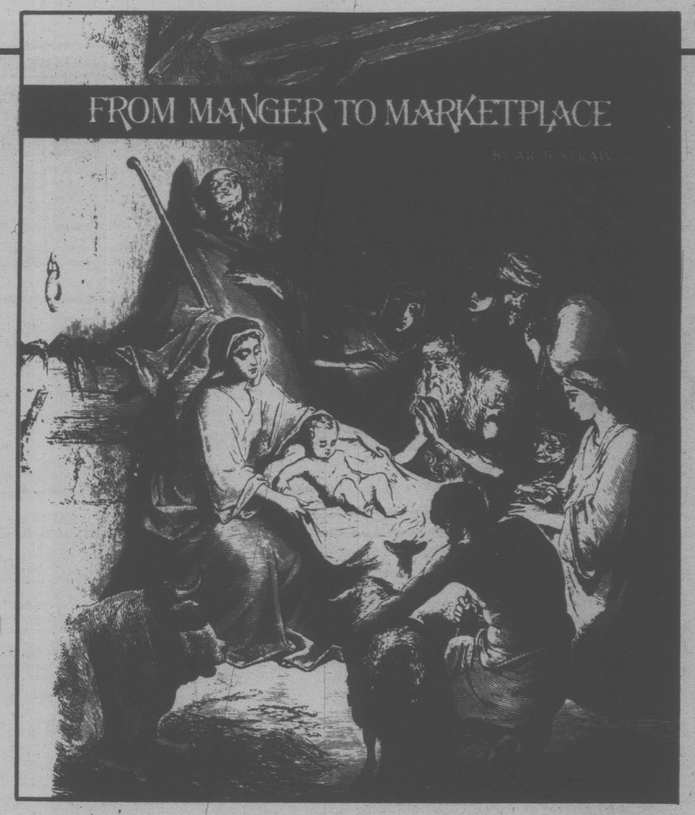
Isn't it amazing how so many people can be in the same store, at the same time, all trying to buy the very gift you had YOUR heart set on? No wonder more and more people are deciding on Safeway gift certificates for Christmas. Just stroll into any Safeway . . . unroll your Christmas list . . . and order your Safeway gift certificates in any amount. Then tuck each certificate into an envelope with a cheery greeting card, and mail it with your love and a fourteen cent stamp anywhere there is a Safeway Store. To an aunt in Scotland, or a cousin in England. To a brother in Australia, or a pen pal in West Germany. To Wollogong, or Wimbledon . . . or just about any place in Canada or the United States.

Those deceptively simple little gift certificates are good for anything Safeway has on its shelves. Apples to Zucchinis . . . iceboxes to camp stoves . . . Hair dryers and tape decks and things for the home, the car, even the cat. And no worry about mailing dates, or customs, or wondering if you chose the right thing. Because a Safeway gift certificate is ALWAYS the right thing.

So make Christmas simple for you . . . and simply wonderful for someone you want to say Merry Christmas to. A gift certificate from Safeway will do it every time.

SINGER FROM DOWN-UNDER HELPS SAFEWAY — C-FAX SANTAS ANONYMOUS GO UP...AND OVER

Christmas means many things to each one of us. To small children, it means something exciting under the Christmas Tree, or in the stocking. To families everywhere, it means something tasty on the table for Christmas Dinner. Santas Anonymous makes these good things come true for hundreds of needy Victoria families. Spearheaded by Canada Safeway and C-FAX, and organized by hard-working Santas Anonymous co-ordinator Marilyn Cann, the gift-and-goodies campaign is underway again, this year, and as last year, Rolf Harris, Australia's musical good-will ambassador will be making a special radio appearance on Paul Mann's show to reinforce the importance of the campaign. Rolf will also headline three McPherson Theater benefit shows, to raise additional Santas Anonymous funds. Isn't it true? Making someone else's Christmas merry makes our own Yuletide merry, as well.



In medieval times, it was known as "Christes Mass". And that is what it was . . . a mass, or holy celebration to mark the birth of Christ. But somehow, through the years, we seem to have changed more than just the spelling of the time-honored word. For many, the journey of the Magi has become an annual exodus to "sun and fun" as we're urged to spend Christmas almost anywhere but home. And the simple gifts of frankincense and myrrh seem lost and forgotten in today's mad hassle of buying sprees and social get-togethers.

There was no room at the Inn when Christ came to earth so many years ago. Is there STILL no room for Him today? I went to Captain Bill Merritt, of the Salvation Army, with my question.

"No room for Christ in today's Christmas?" The quiet voice hesitated briefly as Captain Merritt searched for the right words. "No room? There must be room. Without the 'Christ' in Christmas, the whole spirit of love and good will could disappear. Unless the love of Christ enters into it," he continued firmly, "we're left with nothing but an empty, meaningless ritual that celebrates . . . nothing at all."

Yet surely that is what Christmas has become for too many people. A harried, hurried ritual that starts with store window displays somewhere between Halloween and Remembrance Day, and all too often ends in a torrent of unpaid bills flooding through the January mails. How did it happen? How did a simple story . . . a story St. Luke could tell in less than six hundred simple words . . . so lose its basic meaning. How did the Manger become the marketplace?

For Pastor Alan McLean, of Victoria's Apostolic Church, the reason was plain and straightforward. "How did the Manger turn into the market place?" he repeated. "It changed because we have taken away the basic meaning of Christmas. Look at the hectic way most of us celebrate Christ's Birthday today, and compare it with the way Christ Himself told us to remember Him. In all the scriptures" he continued, "Christ gave us only one law for remembrance of Him, and that is the law of the Communion Table. 'Eat this . . . drink this . . . in remembrance of Me.' What has this simple command to do with what we have made of Christmas today?"

His voice firmed as he continued. "When you strike at the roots," he said, "the whole plant withers and dies. You cannot destroy Christianity's basic beliefs, as so many have done today, without striking at the very meaning of Christianity itself."

But surely, for many of us, there is still warmth and love in Christmas home-comings. Surely there is still true generosity in the giving of gifts, and warm affection in the greetings we send each other at Christmas time. True, we have travelled far from the simple tale told by St. Luke, and affirmed by the Shepherds. No angel wakes our hills and valleys with the joyous news of His Birth. All too often, greed and distrust and fear leave their ugly mark on things that were once pure and beautiful . . . even the celebration of Christmas . . . and we have no star now to guide us back to that rough stable. But year after year, Christmas returns to us with its message of hope, and year after year, we welcome its return. And for most of us, somewhere in all the noisy clamor will be the still, small moment of Peace, when we know in our hearts the true meaning of Christ's Day.

If this can survive, in spite of all the things the 20th Century can do to us, is there not still a hope that the real spirit of Christmas . . . the "Christe's Masse" . . . will also survive? Dr. Doug Roberts, of the Church of the Way, believes it can. "Though I cannot actually see such a return at present," he admits.

"But I CAN anticipate it." he went on. Because there is such a growing dis-enchantment with our present life style. People are longing for a return to the basics." he told me. I hear it every day, from believer and non-believer alike. The pain of our "non-family" existence is too great. They seek a return to the family, and all it means. People want the comfort . . . the warmth . . . the honesty of simplicity. Yes . . . they want the 'Christ' back in 'Christmas'. And if they want it enough . . . it can happen."

If we want it enough . . . it can happen. The choice is ours.

THE OTHER SHEPHERD

BY ARLIE STRAW

Look . . . it was long ago. The mind plays tricks when you're old.
I can tell you one thing, though . . . the night was cold!
And the sheep were giving me trouble. You see, I'd left it too late,
And I had to bed them down outside Bethlehem gate.
And there was this lamb . . . tucked under my cloak to keep warm.
(A foolish thing that had lost its dam in a storm.)
I remember three strangers passing . . . and a strange light . . .
And all around me the winter hills were bright.
It was a star . . . at least, I think it was . . . though who ever saw a star
Move like a lantern? . . . or cast a gleam so far?
And . . . I can't believe it yet! . . . I left my sheep
And I followed the light to the place where the star stood still . . .
And there was this Baby, lying there on the hay.
A new-borne Babe . . . Well, what more is there to say?
I thought He looked cold . . . so I tucked the lamb at His feet
To keep Him warm. Well, you know how a lamb WILL bleat.
And it woke Him up. And He smiled at me. And that's all I remember.
Except it was cold on the hill that late December.

PORTUGAL: FAMILY AND FRIENDS

Dina Abelenda, of the North Douglas Delicatessen, 3891 Douglas Street, is from the island of San Miguel in the Azores. According to Dina, Christmas Eve is the main time of celebration, with the entire family gathering in the afternoon to put up the tree and crib. Just before midnight, they sit down to the traditional dinner of vegetable soup, bacalhau a Portuguesa (dried cod, boiled and served with boiled potatoes, cabbage and cauliflower), sweet bread and rice pudding. They attend midnight mass together, and the rest of the night is devoted to visiting friends and relatives. "Nobody goes to bed that night," says Dina with a twinkle, "but our celebrations are very simple."

LEBANON: A GENUINE FEAST

It's just the opposite in the Middle East, according to Georges and Helene Murr, proprietors of the Beirut Restaurant in Stadacona Centre. Up to 40 members of the family gather at the home of the eldest male for a feast that begins the evening of December 24th, and goes on all night, to finish in time for morning mass on Christmas Day.

"There can be 30 to 40 dishes on the table at the same time," says Georges. "Everyone nibbles and visits and talks."

The traditional Lebanese feast will have 7 to 10 different appetizers, with several different main courses such as Ouza (whole baby lamb stuffed and baked), and a great variety of sweets, cakes and pastries, some of which are made only at Christmas.

You can sample a Lebanese style Christmas feast at the Beruit Restaurant this year. Contact Georges Murr for information.

GREECE: "HRONIA POLLA"

Holiday visitors will hear this greeting meaning "many happy years ahead" throughout the cities, villages and fabled islands of Greece. And on Christmas Day, visitors will see children knocking on every door and singing carols.

Dimitri Mavrikos, owner of Milos (The Windmill) Restaurant on Burdett Street, describes Christmas dinner on the island of Skyros in the Aegean, as being "mainly roast lamb, or spit-roasted whole suckling pig. There is some turkey now, but it is a newcomer." At noon on Christmas Day, Greek families gather for a meal that begins with a variety of hot and cold appetizers, such as cheese, olives, and spicy homemade sausages. There is always Horiatiki, the traditional Greek salad, and the meal is followed by such special Christmas desserts as Kourambiedes, the Greek shortbread.

If that whets your appetite, ask about the special Greek Christmas dinner Dimitri is planning at Milos Restaurant.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA: SIMPLICITY

On the banks of the Danube River is Bratislava, the Slovakian capital of Czechoslovakia, and former home of Marta Klinovsky of the Falcon Artistic Gymnastics School on Johnson Street.

"In Czechoslovakia, Christmas is very plain," Marta says. On December 24th, the family puts up the tree, sits down to a simple meal, and then opens their presents.

The table is always set with a bowl of fruit from all seasons and a loaf of bread, to symbolize the wish that "you have fruit and bread in the year to come". The meal begins with wafers dipped in honey, and Kapustnica (sauerkraut and mushroom soup). Fried carp, potato salad, and special Christmas pastries stuffed with poppy seeds or walnuts complete the simple meal.

Carp is a European river fish, which unfortunately is not available in Victoria, so Marta now substitutes fillet of sole or salmon.

MEXICO: A HIGH ENERGY CHRISTMAS

Parties nightly for weeks! Delia Jacobson, originally from Mexico City, who now teaches Spanish at Belmont Secondary, Camosun College and the Y, reveals that a Mexican Christmas requires a good deal of stamina. The festivities run from December 16th til February 2nd, with parties every single night from mid-December to Christmas Eve.

The family celebrates together on Christmas Eve, with dinner at midnight, followed by attendance at the first mass of Christmas Day. A typical Mexican Christmas dinner will consist of cream soup, salad, Bacalao, which is Norwegian "lutififk" (dried fish) cooked Mexican style with tomatoes, onions and peppers, followed by turkey and trimmings, and special Christmas marzipan treats.

Norwegian fish? A traditional Mexican dish? "The Spanish introduced it over 4 centuries ago," Delia explains.

Santa Claus is a relative newcomer at Christmas in Mexico, but (you may want to keep this from your kids) Mexican children enjoy two days of gift-giving, since, following tradition, the Three Kings continue to come bearing gifts on January 5th. The advent of the Three Kings sets off a further round of parties, which last until February 2nd!

There's a lot more to be said for Christmas dinners in Victoria than "pass the turkey, please"!

If you'd like to add a traditional dish from another country to your Christmas dinner this year, try these:

FROM SOUP

TO BRANDY & NUTS

KAPUSTNICA
(CZECHOSLOVAKIAN SOUP)

10½ ounces sauerkraut (canned or fresh)
¾ ounce dried mushrooms
1½ ounces dried prunes
1 bay leaf
dash of ground caraway seed
2½ pints of water
8¾ ounces sour cream (or half and half)
1 ounce flour
1½ ounces oil
1½ ounces chopped onion
1 tablespoon red paprika

Cook the first 6 ingredients in water until tender. Add the sour cream mixed with flour, and simmer about 7 minutes. Fry onion and paprika in oil. Remove from pan when brown and add to the soup. Simmer, stirring occasionally till all is cooked well. To thin, if you wish, add milk.

MEXICAN MARZIPAN

1 cup sugar
1 cup almond paste (recipe follows)

Beat the egg white at high speed for 2 minutes, then beat in sugar until dissolved. Beat in the almond paste, thinning with a few drops of lemon juice if necessary. Work into fruit shapes, and colour with vegetable colours using a thin brush.

Almond Paste:
1 lb., 1½ ounces almonds, mashed
2 cups sugar
1 cup water
8 tablespoons orange juice or kirsch
few drops rosewater

Dissolve sugar in water and boil until it turns very thick. Add liquids and mashed almonds. Remove from heat and beat until smooth, until you can handle it. Wrap in waxed paper, and let stand 12 hours.

Here's a special bonus!

MEXICAN CHRISTMAS PUNCH

26 ounces semi-sweet red wine
13 ounces brandy
½ pound chopped nuts

Heat the wine and brandy on low heat, add the nuts (and a bit of sugar if necessary) and serve hot!

"You know, Toby, both those Santas were just trying to make you feel good, just the way the real Santa does—because there's a bit of the real Santa in all of us."

Toby thought about that until he went to bed and when he got up in the morning he set to work making something secret. He wouldn't say what it was or who it was for. Then he asked for wrapping paper and wrapped it up very carefully using lots of scotch tape.

That very day Aunt Patti came to visit again and he asked her to take him back to see the second Santa. She was a little puzzled but she and Toby and the parcel got on the bus and away they went. When they got to the store, Toby walked up to Santa.

"Hi," said Santa, "you were here yesterday."

Toby nodded and then he asked, "Who are you—really?"

Santa was very quiet for a minute and then he leaned down close to Toby's ear and whispered, "I'm Fred."

"I'm Toby," said Toby, "and I came to say I'm sorry for being rude yesterday."

"Well that's alright," said Santa Fred.

"I have a present for you," said Toby and handed him the parcel.

"Why thank you, Toby," said Santa Fred.

"You see," said Toby, climbing on Santa Fred's lap, "there's a bit of the real Santa in all of us."

And Santa Fred and Santa Toby smiled at each other and had a picture taken together.
